NEW YORK, July 1.—Richard W. Graves, 28 years old, of No. 71 Washington street, Harrison, N. J., lost his life because he wanted to hear a joke. He was working in the Crucible Steel Company's building in Harrison with John Griggs and another man, putting up new wiring.

Griggs and the other man climbed to a scaffold about 20 feet in the air to pursue their work. They were laughing and joking. Graves, curious to hear the joke, started to climb the ladder, Graves with a live wire in his hands. Griggs instantly struck Graves on the head with the handle of a hammer to shock him and make him fall away from his grip on the wire. Graves toppied and Griggs reached down and caught him as he started to fall. He
