VOYAGES AND CAPID

Young California War Widow Becomes Sea Chaperone.

WOMAN TO BE SHIP OFFICER To Fill Important Post Aboard Steamship Great Northern.

Lattimore Proposes to Become First-Class Sailor.

"Sea voyages are among Cupid's first aids—oh my, yes!" sweetly says Mrs. Vera Lattimore, a 27-year-old widow of California, who is to become one of the full-fledged officers of the steamship Great Northern within a short time.

Being of European parentage and education, Mrs. Lattimore has clearly defined ideas of the part she will play on the midwinter voyages to the tropical islands looking after the youths and maidens and regulating more or less the love affairs of those on board.

"To fill the post I propose to fill requires that one be a first-class sailor," remarked Mrs. Lattimore. "In Europe the duties of social hostess and ship chaperone is often filled by the most exclusive society women who have been thrown upon their own resources. I shall make it easier for people composing a large party to get acquainted properly and become freer at the outset of a voyage. I also look after the daughters of seafaring mammals—understand, altogether—there are many little diplomatic missions that fall under the attention of the official hostess."

"I shall make it a special point to see that everyone has a good time in social affairs aboard ship," Mrs. Lattimore is a war widow. She followed her husband to the French lines and was turned back. He was killed in action, and she is now in California with relatives.

Council last night tendered his resignation, which was accepted, and F. A. Wilson was elected to fill the vacancy. This will stop the proposed recall of Mr. Loeding; Captain F. C. Harlow did not resign and may serve another month before recall proceedings can be started.

There is some doubt as to the eligibility of the new Councilman, Mr. Wilson, as it was stated he had not taken out his second naturalization papers. Through some misunderstanding, Water Superintendent Mullan shut off the water supply to 126 consumers late Tuesday afternoon without notice and a large delegation appeared at the Council and demanded that water be turned on, which was ordered. They had not paid up, because they did not know to whom to pay.

NEW VAMPIRE EPISODES SET SOCIETY ALL AGOG Film Rapidly Reaching Point Where Novice Can Discern Villainy of Paul Pike, Who is in Siren's Clutches.

SOCIETY is agog over the latest series of episodes filmed for the movie, "Veda the Vampire." A considerable flurry has arisen from the recent remarkable accidents which recently befell Mrs. Pearl Pike, a prominent society matron, the part being played by Miss Barbara Bartlett.

After being pushed from the top of Multnomah Falls by her husband and then discovering that her small daughter had been overthrown by an army of malignant disease germs, Mrs. Pike has unveiled the secret of her husband's growing coldness. It had been noticeable in society that Mrs. Pike, that is Lloyd Smith, had been growing indifferent toward his wife, but few suspected that his to extremes. But the influence of the vampire woman over his life is now manifest, for the spell of her presence has brought on two more overt acts.

Pike's Hate Shown. While standing with her husband at the top of Multnomah Falls Tuesday, Mrs. Pike was suddenly shoved out to space. Emerging from the pool and drying herself as best she could, Mrs. Pike tried to pass the matter off lightly, but a further episode, which occurred yesterday, has convinced her of her husband's lack of good faith.

According to the film, Mrs. Pike, in company with her young daughter, Shirley Eastham, while taking a stroll in Washington Park yesterday morning was startled by a series of fits and convulsions which were visited upon the child. Paul Pike, it was later discovered, had poisoned the tea, the coffee and the milk with germs of whooping cough, scarlet fever, measles, influenza and other malignant diseases, and instead of being swallowed by the mother as intended, they were absorbed into the system of the child.

Enter "Dr. Kerron. Mrs. Pike, alarmed by the fits into which the child had fallen, rushed frantically to the Hunt Club headquarters, and Mrs. James H. Murphy immediately mounted her horse Brigada and set out for a doctor. She returned to the spot where the child had fallen, bringing Harry Kerron, a prominent horseman, behind her on Brigada. Kerron played the doctor (not a horse doctor) and immediately diagnosed the case as an attack of germs.

Whether the child died or not was not ascertained by the reporter, but from her agony it was evident that she had at least received an ample lesson. The culpability of the husband has not been questioned. His sinister purpose is now only too apparent, as all movie patrons will easily be able to divine. Society, too, has branded his conduct as extremely reprehensible, and steps will be made to make him feel some responsibility for the two narrowly averted accidents.
