wants to know if she thinks he is a millionaire.

"He wouldn't believe it. He would merely say you had a fit of omph."

"I suppose there is no way of discovering these traits beforehand, is there?" sighed the Stenographer Daughter.

"No, a man is on his best behavior before marriage."

"And on his worst afterward," said the Woman-From-Across-the-Street, sticking her head in at the door.

"You just have to love him so much," said Mother, smiling at the Woman-From-Across-the-Street.

"They get on your nerves just the same," said the Woman-From-Across-the-Street.

"I'm no peace-at-any-price person," replied the Woman-From-Across-the-Street.

"But if it's going to be continuous warfare," soothed Mother, "you'd better try education. That's the ultimate basis by whatever road you reach it."

WOMEN WHO LEAD THE WAY BY MARIE DILLE

Mrs. E. R. Wells, President of National Woman's Relief Society.

WITHOUT doubt the most influential woman of Utah is Mrs. Emmeline B. Wells, 96 years old.

The National Women's Relief Society is an organization of about 40,000 women.

Her headquarters, where the work of the organization has its foundation is the office of the "Women's Exponent" of which she is the publisher.

This journal is the second oldest woman's paper in the West. The office is the hospitable gathering place of men and women from all parts of the world.

Because of her long life in the West, Mrs. Wells has collected an invaluable and inexhaustible supply of information of a general nature and many of those who come to her have come to seek information unobtainable elsewhere.

Mrs. Wells was born in Massachusetts, and at the age of 14 became a member of the Mormon church and began her memorable journey westward.

By carriage she went to Boston, where she took the railroad train to Albany. From there she passed through the Erie canal by boat to Buffalo and by way of Lake Erie and rivers to Nauvoo, Ill.

Although but a child when she left her home, Mrs. Wells was able to bring with her westward a little of the education and culture of the comparatively well-settled East.

As the most prominent woman in Utah, Mrs. Wells early attracted the attention of the rest of the country and
