tress, 15-year-old May Hennessy, had forgotten to feed him since the day before. That was the last straw. The chipmunk forgot his manners. With a determined squeak he leaped upon the range and plumped into the frying pan. The retreat was immediate and dotted with crises of pain. The scorched paws were dragged through a cool pan of milk and the chipmunk scorched paws were dragged through a cool pan of milk and the chipmunk disappeared. Up to a late hour last night the household pet Miss Hennessy had saved from a carnivorous cat still was in hid-ing in some dark nock, far from frying-pans. Hunger not having been ap-peased, his appearance is looked for early today, but in a more subdued search for food.
