

The Oregonian

PORTLAND, OREGON. Entered at Portland (Oregon) Postoffice as second-class mail matter. Subscription rates: In advance. (By Mail.) Daily, Sunday included, one year, $3.00...

PORTLAND, SATURDAY, AUG. 19, 1916.

A WISE VETO—WHY NOT OTHERS?

President Wilson gives sound reasons for his veto of the Army appropriation bill. Since retired Army officers continue to draw pay from the Government and are liable to be recalled to duty in time of war, they should remain subject to Army discipline...

KILLING A MAN BY MISTAKE.

The Marshfield Record issues an energetic warning to careless hunters who are responsible for accidents, and often for homicides, during the deer-hunting season. The Oregonian, in its issue of August 16, was the first to point out the danger of this time-honored sport...

USEFUL BOY SCOUTS.

Recent assistance given in Eastern cities by Boy Scouts in time of threatened plague has emphasized the value of training for service that these youths represent and the practical results, attained as the result of discipline while they have been accomplished in no other way...

SMALL SURPLUS OF WHEAT.

The Government need look no further than the available supply of wheat for an explanation of the high price reached by that cereal. The situation is stated in August crop reports by a Chicago correspondent of the New York Evening Post. He says that North America will be called upon to furnish Europe with $4,000,000 bushels...

seed are expected to leave a surplus of only $4,000,000 out of 654,000,000 bushels. The carry-over from last season, 163,000,000 bushels, brings the total to 817,000,000 bushels. Export of 160,000,000 bushels would leave a reserve of only 37,000,000 bushels, though we exported nearly 250,000,000 bushels in the season of 1914-15 and nearly 173,000,000 bushels in that of 1915-16.

NOT "POIRK"

The Oregonian is, and has been, convinced that a naval base within the entrance of the Columbia River is a project of obvious and unquestionable merit. It is not favorable to a naval base here, for the mere reason that it will help Astoria or the Columbia River, but because of the extreme National. For reasons of natural defense, for the adequate protection of the Pacific Coast, the Oregonian has urged immediate recognition of the immense strategical value of the location...

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Inasmuch as Dr. Foster, in a letter published in another issue of this journal, has kindly written a widely circulated criticism of the Oregon marriage examination law, it may be inferred that the quotation credited to him by a contemporary wherein The Oregonian was accused of showing a narrow and shortsighted policy in insisting the same law was spurious...

THE LAST OFFENSIVE BEGINS.

Attack on and capture of Doiran by the Serbians and the general bombardment from Monastir to the Vardar River may be the first moves in the last of the series of allied offensives which has marked the carrying out of their combined plan of campaign in Europe. It appears to have been fitted to follow the reported transfer of 150,000 troops and an indefinite number of Bulgarian units to Macedonia to succor the Austrians...

Bargain All Around.

Well, teachers are not all alike. Two have notified the Board of intention to marry and have resigned. The difference, however, may be in the husbands. What a lucky woman to be claimed as wife by two millionaires, while many a woman thinks she is fortunate to be possessed by one poor man.

Money in the Bank.

Who, now, will impel party success, Congress or the President? Going somewhere tomorrow?

of the "tip" seldom fails to realize his own position, whether he admits it or not. He is either callous on the subject, or it embitters him. In the latter case, he rails at others because of the barrier he himself has raised. Boy Scout activities give the greatest possible promise of abolishment of the system; they are more hopeful of tangible results in that direction than all the anti-trusting societies to be counted.

In recent years we have been too much afraid of the word "servant." A politician holding office will sometimes call himself a public servant, because that has a fine flavor of anti-aristocracy about it, and he has the same reason that he avoids wearing his silk hat when he talks to the factory hands in his district. But the chances are that he calls his householders at home "ma'am," thus proving he is strongly class-conscious after all.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

miles distant. Several strongly fortified lines intervene between them and Trieste, and some fierce battles must be fought if they are to reach that port. Should they invest Trieste, Fiume on the opposite side of the Istrian peninsula, and Pola, the great naval base at its point, would still be before them. The investment of Pola would probably cause the Austrian fleet to go out and challenge the Italians to a naval battle, in which the British and French would be apt to take a hand.

Ability of the allies to continue their furious attacks on four widely separated fronts at one time is a necessary condition of their plan of thwarting the game to which the Teutons owe a large measure of their success in 1915.—transfer of troops from one front to another. This requires an enormous supply of guns and ammunition, constantly replenished. Already there are signs that they are at the limit of their resources.

INDIAN NAMES MEAN SOMETHING.

Therefore Mr. Yates Doubts Indian Origin of Riekraall. WARRINGTON, Or., Aug. 17.—(To the Editor)—I have read with interest your article comparing the names of the Dallas river, "La Creole," and "Riekraall." You are right in saying that these names are of Indian origin. But you are wrong in saying that the name "Riekraall" is of Indian origin. The name "Riekraall" is of Indian origin.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

FIRST PARTY UP DIFFICULT PEAK. Mazama Recalls Ascent of North Sister Mountain in 1903. PORTLAND, Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—The man who made the first ascent of Three Sisters?

This question suggests itself as one reads the very interesting letter by Miss Beatrice Young, historian of the Mazamas, published in The Oregonian, recounting her adventures on the Mazamas encamped on this storm-racked group of mountains. The surmise is therein made that H. H. Prosty made the first ascent of the North Sister in 1910. But with all courtesy to Mr. Prosty's extraordinary skill in cliff-climbing, his true Mazama delight to honor, it is evident that others preceded him.

In 1903 a star party of Mazamas ascended the North Sister peak. This party comprised Rodney L. Gilsan, H. W. German, Leslie Scott, E. P. Shelton, H. H. Prosty and Colonel S. H. Hawkins. These placed the copper box of the Mazamas on the summit of the Middle Sister, ascended the South Sister peak, and upon the occasion of Colonel Hawkins, and placed the Mazama box on the summit; while two of them, Prosty and German, ascended the North Sister, and made the first ascent of the North Sister, pronounced "impenetrable" in United States Government reports. An account of this climb by H. L. Gilsan, illustrated by some fine photographs, will be found in Mazama Bulletin of December, 1903, and has since been reprinted by myself in the Pacific Monthly for November, 1903.

The question arises, was not this the first ascent of the North Sister? So far as any evidence has been made public Rodney L. Gilsan and E. H. Loomis appear to have made the first ascent of this difficult north peak. About 1884 or 1885, Adolph Dekum, Judge E. M. Walsh and the writer, Edward Humston ascended the Middle and South Sisters. Many years ago I had the privilege of reading Mr. Dekum's account of this trip and the information of detailed information. He is now the only surviving member of this party, and has long been a valued and modest member of our Mazama Club; he should no longer be permitted to hide his light under a bushel; his story should be told to the world in high time that this mountaineering feat should be rescued from oblivion. Mr. Dekum states that while seated on the rocky rock at the base of the South Sister, Judge Walsh found his compass acting in very crazy fashion and was restored to normal condition after it had been removed some distance from the rock, which probably contained much iron, causing it to act as a compass. Many evidences are found of the havoc of lightning. A large lake on the mountain was measured with a 40-foot line which did not reach bottom; this was probably the extinct crater; the water in it was quite clear.

Whether this will prove to be the first ascent of the Middle and South Sisters is a matter well worth investigation on the part of the Mazamas. GERTRUDE METCALFE. BUT WHAT OF JAMES BUCHANAN? Wilson Better Compared With Him Than With Lincoln.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

Tourists' Pronouncing Gazetteer.

The Indian bronchs they picket at The ranges round the Kllickitlat. Or tie them to the thickest at The borders of the Kllickitlat. At socials they make taffy yet in the fair fields of Lafayette. There is a variant and localized pronunciation of the name of the foregoing city which is better rendered as follows: Who ever saw a gay fay yet Among the groves round Lafayette? There was James Buchanan from another source the following guide to its pronunciation without a struggle: The wheat is sometimes chaffy yet in the fair fields of Lafayette.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN. But Dr. Foster Believes Eugenics Act Has Educational Value.

PORTLAND, Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—The Oregon Social Hygiene Society had nothing to do directly or indirectly with the Oregon law requiring health certificates for marriage. Certain members of the executive committee of the society, including Dr. Andrew C. Smith, then a member of the Legislature, legally opposed to the law. All the officers of the society saw from the outset that the law would do little direct value in preventing the spread of disease because it was obvious that only a few physicians in any state have equipment necessary for adequate examinations for the purpose.

The society has seen from the outset the danger of creating a false sense of security through the issuing of health certificates without adequate examinations. This danger and the inadequacy of the law have been pointed out in scores of public addresses by officers of the association. The weakness of the law as a means of preventing the spread of disease is pointed out in an article by William T. Foster, president of the Oregon Social Hygiene Society, in the July number of "Social Hygiene," published by the Young Men's and several thousand copies of the article have been distributed in Oregon.

A number of the executive committee of the society believe that the law has educational value since it forces thousands of men and women to consider the nature of venereal diseases, the laws of heredity and the consequent responsibilities of parenthood at the very time when the purpose is so important for them to think seriously about these matters. It is clear, however, that no provision has been made by the state for filling the purpose of the law. If the state requires adequate examinations, it should also require that the results of such examinations be made available to the public. The Oregon Social Hygiene Society has been criticized for not providing such means. The society, however, has no objection to such a provision since its appropriations have been made solely for educational activities. The field actually covered by the society during the past five years is the present scope of its work is set forth in a bulletin published this Summer, available for free distribution, copies of which may be obtained on application to the central offices of the society at 720 Seeling building.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

WILSON BETTER COMPARED WITH LINCOLN.

KENTON, Or., Aug. 18.—(To the Editor)—Dear Sir: I have read with interest your article comparing Mr. Wilson to Mr. Lincoln. You are right in saying that Mr. Lincoln was a man of great power and vision, and that Mr. Wilson is a man of great power and vision. But you are wrong in saying that Mr. Wilson is a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was a man of greater power and vision than Mr. Wilson.

In Other Days.

Twenty-five Years Ago. From the Oregonian of August 12, 1891. A force of men will be put to work at once to construct a coal bunker with a capacity of 200 tons, where the O. C. & N. Co.'s tracks cross the Coos Bay Roseburg Railroad.

The Arago, a large four-masted vessel, was launched at North Bend Saturday. A large number from Marshfield and other points along the bay witnessed the launching. State Fish Commissioner Myers returned yesterday from the Sound where he spent several days looking into the salmon industry.

There are a large number of fish in the Lincoln-street reservoir, most of them small ones, probably pumped in through the main. Most of them are crabs or pike, but there are a few trout and two large carp. The picnic and reunion of the G. A. R. held yesterday at Pleasant Home, was a big success. The gathering was called to order by Charles J. Stephens, who, after a brief speech, introduced Captain R. N. Bradley, who delivered the address of welcome.

Centenary M. E. Church closed up its business for the conference just ended in good shape. Mrs. Busong left for conference last evening. OREGON FARMER TO A NEIGHBOR. Good morning, Wright, how do you do? I see you've got your grain. All out an' coked the same as mine, an' now just let her rain! We can't complain of crops this year, an' you can't, like them from the States. The crop o' candidates has got all previous records downed. They come to my place every day an' smile at me.

With candy fur the wimmen folks an' cheap cigars fur me. An' way they ladle out the talk from their aspirin. Must sure be awful tryin' on their automatic tongues. I took the family in the car to Portland 'fther night To hear Hughes make his campaign talk. An' I just tell you, Wright. He turned me about his mistakes, an' our President has made 'em. An' didn't sugar-coat his words—he called a spade a spade. He shook up the Democratic faith, circumference to core. An' started me to thinkin' as I'd never thought afore.

An' while we were drivin' home I told my wife that we Was nebba somewhat party blind through party loyalty. I've drunk my inspiration from the Democratic cup. As that o' ancient sayin' goes, since Adam was a pup, Democratic an' Democratic doctor sort o' engineered my blood.

I've voted with the Democrats since old enough to vote. Have never felt inclined to turn my Democratic coat; But since I heard Hughes make his talk the other night I've been A-feelin' like I'd ought to shed my Democratic skin. I love our grand Old Glory flag. I sit for it, you know, In that big civil war a half a century ago. An' every time I see it now a-wavin' in the air, I feel like I've got my hat an' givin' it a cheer.

I've taught my boys to love it. In that Philippines affair, I've showed their loyalty, an' one lies buried there. An' one that then was but a kid now plays a patriot hand With arms an' bare soldier boys down on the Rio Grande. When them tan-colored Greasers an' them haughty foreign powers Cast insult after insult at that sacred flag o' ours, I felt my blood a-billin' as it did in the air.

But thought that nebba Wilson knowed the best thing to be done. I tried hard to endorse his watchful watchful policy. But aggravin' terms o' doubt kept settin' into me. Till I got 'straddled of the fence; but since I've heard Hughes Sise up the true conditions, I am apt to change my views. —JAMES BAHTON ADAMS.

Uncle Sam's Road Building Plans In The Sunday Oregonian

Permanent highway construction now has been reduced to a scientific basis. Within the last 10 years it has progressed from the hands of the district road supervisor, through the charge of township, county and state authorities, into the province of the National Government. Uncle Sam, as a mere beginning, has appropriated $10,000,000 for road construction in the National forests. Read what Uncle Sam contemplates in the way of future road work in Tomorrow's Oregonian.

IRRIGATING THE SAHARA—This is no idle dream. Its development depends more or less on the outcome of the great war. A writer in Sunday's paper has outlined the plan for this important undertaking and has introduced some timely pictures illustrating the narrative. COOS BAY AND PORTLAND—Now that the railroad to Coos Bay has been completed, the locality is brought into nearer relationship with Portland and the outside world. Tomorrow's Oregonian will present a series of pictures illustrating some of the principal points of interest in the Coos Bay country—also a story describing its attractions and principal resources.

A NEW ART—Artists have created a new art. It is a curious blending of German art and French art. It is hard to write about this art. It is better described by illustrating it. That's what will be done in the big paper tomorrow—in colors. TEMPLE'S TRINITY—Meaning that three more sketches from real life will appear tomorrow—drawn by Harry Temple, student of human nature. FOOTPRINTS IN YOUR ALBUM—Finger prints are an accepted means of identification, in use in all well-regulated police departments. The latest adaptation of this new art is to preserve the footprints of your babies. It will prevent getting the wrong baby by mistake some time.

SOME OLD PHOTOGRAPHS—This story reveals the fact that photography is an art nearly 100 years old; that Andrew Jackson, who was elected President of the United States in 1828, sat for his photograph. It is an interesting account of some of the earliest work done by the early-day photographers. Some of the very photographs made in the early part of the last century are used to illustrate the story. YUKON TERRITORY—This is an interesting account, by Frank G. Carpenter, of present-day conditions in the Yukon Territory of Alaska. Yukon is part of a Canadian province, and it presents some conditions of government and development peculiar to itself. It is an interesting story—well illustrated.

LOOK AT THIS LIST OF SPECIALTIES—There will appear in The Sunday Oregonian, in addition to all the foregoing, a complete department devoted to motion pictures, the customary review of latest happenings in the sporting world, the usual four-page comic supplement, the regular society, church and clubwomen's pages, a section devoted to automobiles, and other pages covering the most recent developments in real estate, markets, the drama and other specialized lines of human endeavor.