ALASKAN SURVEY GOES ON SLOWLY

Importance of Government Work to Give Reliable Data Is Asserted.

FEDERAL OFFICIAL HEARD

Dr. E. Lester Jones Tells Audience of Marine Men That Uncharted Rocks Have Bene Doom of $16,000,000 of Shipping.

Of 26,000 miles of coastline, along which wire drag operations must be conducted to determine what hidden obstructions there are to shipping, 8½ per cent of the area has been completed.

Of the total water area, 60 per cent must be swept by wire drags. One uncharted pinacle found was 650 feet high, 95 feet higher than the Washington monument, and its top was covered by only 17 feet of water.

At the rate work is progressing with funds and equipment available, it would require 30 years to finish the task.

Marine annals show that 512 vessels have been lost, other than those operating in the whaling fleet in the far north, representing a value of $16,000,000 and 625 persons were carried down.

Those are some of the salient points of an illustrated talk on survey work in Alaskan waters given yesterday afternoon at Meier & Frank's auditorium to marine and commercial men by Dr. E. Lester Jones, superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. Dr. Jones is here from Washington to get in touch with crews he has in the field, also to meet with men who know of certain conditions in Northwest waterways that may be subjects of special mention in surveys.

Numerous slides exhibited yesterday were made from maps of Alaska and its coast, also of wire drag operations, besides which a moving-picture talk was included showing the drags actually being set, how they were towed by large launches, the methods employed in charting rocks extending above certain depths and many other features.

Uncertainty Is Shown.

In one set Dr. Jones illustrated how mistakes were made when surveys had been conducted only by means of ordinary soundings with lead lines. One cast would reach the bottom, he pointed out, while the next might strike the side of a rock and bounce to a lower shelf on the pinnacle, so the latter would be recorded as the true depth, while, in many cases, rocks would be missed, only to be struck later by a ship.

He said the principal result had been to name numerous rocks on the Alaskan Coast after ships that had struck them and sank. Dr. Jones did not complain of appropriations made by the Government, saying that Congress had taken care of the department on that score, but he said that in order to carry on wire-drag operations, which were needed as well in certain waters along the coast of Washington, Oregon and California, much more money would have to be provided.

Level to Be Run on Rivers.

"I am here to get an idea of the work necessary so as to use the money on hand advantageously," he said. "We have a field party at the mouth of the Columbia River, another between Pendleton and La Grande and others elsewhere in the Northwest. One piece of work we propose is to run a true level from Wallula to the mouth of the Columbia, which will be of marked assistance to Federal and state interests that are concerned with development projects."

Dr. Jones was at Portland last year in the interest of appropriations for new survey vessels with which to carry on the Coast work, and the surveyor will be on the Oregon Coast this Winter. Two additional vessels are required, he said, and that is a matter expected to come before Congress at the next session. He pointed out that wire-drag operations, while primarily needed by the Navy Department and such branches, were of first importance to commercial maritime interests, so dependable sailing charts could be compiled and issued, and he said data on the Alaskan waters would reduce marine insurance rates.

DORR GETS GOOD FREIGHTS

Gulf-Cuban Trade Attracts Pacific Vessels Owing to Higher Rates.

Eastern freight reports show that the steamer Temple E. Dorr, which was dispatched last week for San Francisco on her last voyage from the Columbia River for a time, is to receive $15 for six trips carrying lumber between Gulf ports and Cuba with an option of other Cuban ports at $16.50.

The going rates on this Coast are $6 a thousand feet to San Francisco and $7 to San Pedro and San Diego. Several vessels of the Pacific steam schooner fleet have been picked for the Gulf trade during the past few weeks. The motor schooner June, being finished at St. Helens, and her sister ship, the Roby, to be launched there in a few weeks, are intended for the Gulf trade and it is said the probabilities are the business will be brisk so long as the European conflict continues.

WRECK OF LANGDALE SOLD

Ship and Flour Cargo Bring Low Figure After Abandonment.

Flour cargo which the British ship Langdale carried away from Portland February 17 that was valued at $162,112 was sold the other day, together with the ship, for £700. The drop was not due to a falling market, but to the fact that the Langdale was wrecked August 10 at Ponto Delgada. Immediately after the surveyors finished their task the vessel and cargo were ordered disposed of.

The Langdale is said to have turned over on her port side when she struck rocks there and her condition was such that salvors refused to undertake the task of saving the cargo or equipment of the vessel. At last reports she was breaking up.

INJUNCTION MADE PERMANENT

Seattle Longshoremen Held to Have Harassed Steamship Line.

SEATTLE, Sept. 5.—United States District Judge Neterer today made permanent his temporary injunction, issued July 7, restraining the officers and members of the International Longshoremen's Association, of Puget Sound, from interfering with the business of the Alaska Steamship Company.

The Judge held the evidence showed the defendants had confederated together and with others to prevent the defendant from conducting its business as a carrier of interstate commerce and United States mail.

Marine Notes.

Due in the river today from California ports is the steamer Beaver, of the San Francisco & Portland flag, which sailed from the Golden Gate at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. The Rose City, which left Portland Saturday afternoon, reported at San Francisco at 10 o'clock Monday night.

On the steamer Sue H. Elmore, cleared yesterday for Tillamook and Newport, were 70 tons of merchandise. Inbound the vessel had a cargo that included 1062 cases of canned salmon and 1314 cases of cheese.

Annual inspection of the gasoline schooner Ahwaneda is to be conducted today. It is understood Captain Morse intends to make a voyage to Mexico with the vessel.

On what may be his last voyage as navigator of the steamer Breakwater, Captain T. J. Macgenn left Columbia dock last night bound for San Francisco by way of Marshfield and Eureka. Captain Macgenn has been on the Breakwater since her early days on the Portland-Coos Bay run, when she flew the Southern Pacific flag, and was retired before the completion of the branch railroad from Eugene to North Bend.

Captain C. I. Hooghkirk having resumed command of the steamer Iralda, Captain Percy Davis has signed on as commander of the steamer America again, supplanting Captain I. H. Holman on the latter. Captain W. P. Whitcomb has relieved Captain A. O. Kruse on the steamer Joseph Kellogg. Captain William Lumm is navigating the steamer Diamond O these days, Captain Arthur Riggs having shifted back to the Regulator fleet.

It is expected the steamer Republic will be three days at the mill of the St. Johns Lumber Company, where she shifted yesterday from the North Pacific mill. She returns to the upper harbor then for material ready at Inman-Poulsen's.

Material awaiting shipment here for the Cape Arago light station will be loaded on the tender Manzanita, which is expected to arrive the latter part of the week from Astoria.

After having spent a month at the beach and Rainier Park, Mrs. C. J. Pennicard, of the Custom-house staff, has resumed her duties.

GOVERNMENT SHIPS SAIL AWAY

Vessels Sent to Astoria Regatta Return to Stations.

Since the 1916 annual regatta at Astoria passed into history Monday night, vessels assigned special details there have raised anchors and headed for their permanent stations. The cruiser Marblehead, training ship of the Oregon Naval Militia, which represented the Navy Department there, returned to Portland last night. The United States revenue cutter Unalga left Astoria Monday night for Puget Sound. The lighthouse tender Manzanita, which was on duty there, departs from Astoria tomorrow with buoys for the Columbia and Willamette rivers, which were taken up before the freshet and will now be replaced.

Some of the Portland motorboat parties that went to the regatta returned yesterday, and a few boats made the up-river trip Labor day.

BOYCOTT TO BE SUBJECT

W. G. Merritt, of New York, Will Seak Before Chamber.

Walter Gordon Merritt, of New York, counsel for the American Anti-Boycott Association, will speak on the legal phases of the "boycott" before members of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Manufacturers' Association in the main dining room of the Chamber on Friday at noon.

Mr. Merritt was associated with Daniel Davenport in the celebrated Danbury hatters' case, and is perhaps one of the best-posted men on industrial legislation in the United States.

Owing to the industrial disturbances throughout the country at this time, the message which Mr. Merritt conveys to the business interests of the country will be both interesting and profitable.
