

HUGHES ADVANCES IN STATE TO MEET

Convention Called for October 7, When Whirlwind Campaign Will Be Planned.

REPUBLICANS STIFFEN UP

F. P. Corrick, Progressive National Committeeman of Nebraska, Portland Visitor, Thinks Fealty of That Party Spells Victory.

The state-wide conference of Oregon branches of the Hughes Alliance will be held in Portland Saturday, October 7. The conference was officially called for that date at a meeting yesterday of Judge Charles L. McNary, of Salem, Republican state chairman; Ralph E. Williams, National committeeman; T. E. Neuhausen, vice-chairman, and other members of the Hughes campaign committee.

Mr. Neuhausen, who is supervising the organization of branches of the Hughes Alliance in Oregon, is sending out letters giving formal notification of the conference to the temporary chairman of each of the branches already formed, so that they may have been formed in 42 towns of the state.

Each branch will be entitled to two delegates at the convention for every 25 members. The conference will last only one day, but in that time a great deal of important work is to be transacted.

Among other things, a permanent organization for the Oregon state branch of the National Hughes Alliance will be perfected. The conference will be addressed by speakers of note, and plans made for a whirlwind four weeks' campaign covering every part of the state.

Hall Not Chosen

The hall where the conference will meet has not yet been chosen. It will be announced later. A large attendance of delegates is expected.

State Chairman McNary returned to Salem last night, where his presence was demanded by the serious illness of his brother from pneumonia poisoning. Judge McNary is expected to return to Portland and be at Republican headquarters on Saturday.

"I have been pretty well over the Williams case," said Judge McNary, "and interest in the election is greater than at any time since the campaign opened."

"Republicans are getting up and asserting themselves and I find many Democrats who are going to vote for Mr. Hughes. The result in Maine has added new zest to the whole campaign. I am more than ever convinced that Oregon will give Hughes and Fairbanks a rousing majority."

A caller at Republican headquarters in the Selling building yesterday was F. P. Corrick, of Lincoln, Neb., Progressive National committeeman from that state, who is giving his services to the Republican National Committee as a worker among the Progressives. He conferred here with State Chairman McNary, National Committeeman Williams and Vice-Chairman Neuhausen, who is also state chairman of the Progressive party in Oregon.

Progressives Thought Safe. "The result in Maine is an accurate index of the sentiment of Progressives in all the states that I have visited," said Mr. Corrick. "There can no longer be any doubt that the great bulk of the Progressive vote will be cast for Mr. Hughes in November."

"The significance of the Maine election lies in the fact that the Republican vote, cast by Republicans and former Progressives, tallied almost exactly with the estimates that had been made."

"On my present trip I have been through Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana and Washington. Everywhere I found sentiment strong for Mr. Hughes. The renomination of Mr. Poindexter for United States Senator in Washington, the renomination of Mr. Poindexter for Governor, another Progressive, and the renomination in California of Governor Thompson, all especially satisfactory to the Progressives."

Mr. Corrick left Portland late yesterday for California, where he will remain for a few days meeting Progressive leaders. From there he expects to return direct to Lincoln.

WASHINGTON WELL FUSED

(Continued From First Page.) as chief deputy by State Treasurer John G. Lewis, a Grays Harbor County man, and who has resided in Olympia for the past seven years, thereby making a claim to being a three-county man.

Balance Expected to Harmonize. Along factional lines, the ticket sizes up in the First, Second and Third Congressional districts as having given the important position to a Progressive Senator, an evenly balanced Governor and the Congressional places to what a great many politicians are fond of terming the reactionaries. There never has been any serious quarrel over the balance of the ticket, inasmuch as factional affiliations are concerned.

This, of course, is merely the analysis that would be made by an old-time politician if he took his ticket out of convention to explain to the voters. It is not going to be supported loyally, but the early indications are that it will come as near holding the party together as could any other set of nominees.

Defeated to Support Nominee

There is talk of Republican stand-pat support going to ex-Governor George Turner in preference to Poindexter. This talk is not as general as was the gossip of threats to bolt Poindexter's nomination in the event he won over Will E. Humphrey.

It is a little premature, too, for the returns from the Democratic primaries are not in yet and it might happen that Turner would not be the Democratic choice. All the early indications are that Turner will make the anti-Poindexter fight and unquestionably he will draw a large number of votes. He would have drawn more, though, two months ago.

Colonel Roland H. Hartley, of Everett; George A. Lee and John E. Frost, of Seattle, defeated Republican gubernatorial candidates, have either called upon or written ex-Governor Henry McBride, offering their support in his candidacy for Governor. Other candidates are understood to have prepared to enlist in the McBride fight.

Hodge to Bolt Party Nominee

Again Sheriff Robert T. Hodge, who was defeated as the Bull Moose nominee for Governor four years ago, declares emphatically that, though he does not know whom he will support, he is of the firm opinion that he will fight McBride.

The grievance of Hodge dates back to the campaign of four years ago. McBride was outspokenly a Roosevelt supporter, though he declared from the beginning that he intended to support the remainder of the state ticket.

PARALYSIS MAY BE DEFEATED BY KNIFE

Dr. McClure Tells Physicians That Muscles Can Be Extended to Do New Work.

BRACES NOT AS EFFECTIVE

Lifeless Muscles Can Be Replaced by Those Not Affected by Disease, He Says, and Powers Regained--Gall Bladder Topic.

Numerous advances in orthopedic surgery made in the last few years have developed methods by which deformities resulting from infantile paralysis can be corrected. This is the statement made yesterday by Dr. Charles R. McClure speaking on "Paralytic Deformities of the Feet" before the 42d annual meeting of the Oregon State Medical Society, held at the German House, Thirteenth and Main streets.

"With the corrective methods at our disposal," said Dr. McClure, "we can often accomplish better results without the use of apparatus or braces."

In describing the various deformities that resulted from Poliomyelitis, or infantile paralysis, Dr. McClure mentioned a number of operations that in many cases would restore or improve the power of locomotion.

"The functions of the leg muscles are various," said Dr. McClure, "and a careful adjustment is required between extensors and flexors. Easy walking can ensue only when this adjustment is accomplished."

The efficacy of removing the gall bladder under all conditions was thoroughly discussed by a number of medical authorities. A paper read by Dr. J. A. Pettit advocated more advanced methods in the treatment of gall bladder diseases. Dr. Park Ward Willis, of Seattle, who opened the discussion on this subject, favored greater conservatism, since he believed that the changes in operative treatment oscillated like a pendulum.

Muscles Can Do New Work

The adaptation of muscles to perform in new functions, thus supplanting the muscles rendered useless by disease, was described as a practicable procedure. By changing the fastenings of the muscles, in some cases extending the ligaments, the usefulness of diseased legs can be increased and sometimes restored.

"The functions of the leg muscles are various," said Dr. McClure, "and a careful adjustment is required between extensors and flexors. Easy walking can ensue only when this adjustment is accomplished."

Drainage Is Advised

"Until I know more about this subject," he said, "I should like to follow the usual path. I should provide ample drainage in gall bladder operations until I have more guidance in the other direction." Dr. E. C. Coffey and Dr. Chris O'Day took an active part in the discussion.

Relation of Pleurisy to Tuberculosis

The relation of pleurisy to tuberculosis was explained by Dr. E. A. Pienzo and statistics gathered from reports in 3000 cases were used. A significant connection between the two diseases was established.

"Local Anesthesia" was discussed in a paper by Dr. W. B. Holden, while "The State's Wards" was the subject of the paper by Dr. Mae H. Cardwell. Discussion on the latter was opened by Dr. J. N. Smith, superintendent of the Oregon State School for the Feeble-minded. "Should Physicians Attend Medical Society Meetings" was the subject covered by Dr. J. L. Gilliland, of Pilot Rock.

Besides the address to the Medical Association, which will be delivered by the president, Dr. W. Kuykendall, of Eugene, the programs for today will include six papers on various medical subjects.

Flour 20 Cents Higher

HIGH PRICE OF WHEAT CAUSES ANOTHER JUMP IN PRICES. Market, From Present Indications, Is Likely to Remain at Present Stage for Some Time in the Future.

An advance of 20 cents in flour prices was announced by millers yesterday. The new wholesale quotation on the best grade of patents is $6.50 a barrel. A year ago today flour sold at $5.20, though earlier in 1915 the market was 60 cents a barrel higher than it is now.

The latest advance has been expected for a week, as milling wheat prices in the country have been very strong. At the new flour quotations were being sent out, however, the wheat market took a sudden turn and the price of the big slump at Chicago, when word was received that Argentina was prepared to ship wheat into the United States and sell it cheaper than the domestic article. The Chicago drop was reflected in all the American wheat markets. Buyers in the Northwest promptly reduced their bids and selling by farmers came to a stop.

As milling wheat cannot be "bought in the interior now at any lower prices the present flour quotations will be maintained. The future course of the flour market will depend entirely on the action of wheat."
