PLOT CHARGED BY ESCAPED WOMAN

Commitment as Insane Person Declared Result of Fight Against Property Sale.

SUIT TO CLEAR SELF BEGUN

Mrs. Olive B. Dudley, ex-Portland Resident, Later of Cosmopolis, in Normal State of Mind, Say Mental Experts.

To attempt to clear from the record her commitment to the State Hospital for the Insane at Stellacoom, Wash., Mrs. Olive B. Dudley, ex-wife of James P. Wager, newspaperman of this city. will return to Cosmopolis and Montesano this week. She was committed to that institution last Summer, was an inmate for months, and made her escape Thanksgiving day, after she had nearly succumbed to an attack of pneumonia.

Mrs. Dudley attributes to her independent spirit in the managment of her property interests in Cosmopolis her experiences that, when related in detail, sound like a translation of a page from a work of a Russian revolu-

More than five years ago Mrs. Wage More than five years ago are. Wager left Portland, having lived here for 12 years, and went to Cosmopolis, where she had property interests. Mr. Wager was in poor health, and Mrs. Wager took charge of the property and operated it for the only income derived by the family. She operated the property for five years.

Property Wanted by Company,

Mr. and Mrs. Wager were divorced in the meantime, and she was remarried, the second time to Mr. Dudley. Last Summer Mrs. Dudley had trouble with a company that wanted to acquire her property. She alleges that the company tried to "freeze" her out. Her husband feared results, she says, and suggested that the two leave the city for a while. He suggested that she for a while. He suggested that she come to Portland, and he intended to go to Idaho, where she was interested in mining properties. She agreed to the plan. She was, however, to join him in Idaho later, after she had heard from him. But she waited for more from him. But she waited for more than a week in Portland and no letter came. She returned to Cosmopolis and found a note from him, she said, indicating that he had run away with another woman.

a charge had been made, in her ab-sence, of insanity. When she returned she said she heard vague rumors of such a charge, but could not locate the source from which it enamated. How-ever, she was later committed to the state hospital as a paranolac, her com-mitment being signed after she had been out on bonds for several days.

Communication is Denied.

After her commitment to the hospital, Mrs. Dudley alleges that she was refused visits from friends and that no letters were allowed to reach her. She says she was placed in a ward with a number of other patients and that her nights were sleepless and her days

"Having recovered gradually, I planned to escape," she said. "I realized that the best time to get away from the institution was on a holiday, when the midday meal was had at 2 P. M. instead of 12 o'clock. Accordingly, on Thanksgiving, 1915, I dressed in my best clothes and put on outside of these an old shawl and an old skirt.

"Thus I walked for two miles through the rain and wind, and finally, almost exhausted, went to a farmhouse and was invited inside by the woman of the house. She gave me tea, helped dry my clothes, which had been drenched in the downpour, and did all she could to assist me, not knowing my identity.
"I then telephoned to the auto livery at Stellacoom and asked for a cab to take me the rest of the way to Stella-coom. The authorities had discovered my absence sooner than I expected, and notified the people of Stellacoom to look out for a strange woman. The livery-man was therefore on the lookout, and I was driven back to the state hospi-tal. When the machine in which I was riding drove up to the gates of the institution from which I had just escaped, attendants came out to identify me. But although they climbed into the machine I was not recognized because of the clothing I wore, and was allowed to proceed to Stellacoom. I took no further chances, however, but asked to be driven to Annie Wright Seminary in Tacome, From these I Seminary in Tacoma. From there I caught a train for Portland, and went direct to the home of a relative, Mrs. Clyde Sager, of Lents. On my arrival there I collapsed and was sick for

"The employment bureau of the Charities will be eliminated and arrangement made for co-operation with the Municipal Free Employment Bureau. Under the old plan the employment bureau diverted a great many people to our office who were not actually destitute and who used the employment bureau as a device through which to exploit the Charities. Employment will continue to be the basis of our relief efforts, but under the new arrangement we expect to avoid a great deal of unnecessary relief dispensation. Already since the discontinuance of the employment service in our own bureau there has been a perceptible improvement. It will soon be brought to a basis where relief will be given out through our office direct, only to actually destitute cases.

"I have conferred with both the New York and Chicago headquarters of the Republican National Committee, and have been in touch with various party leaders, and I am firmly convinced that Mr. Hughes will be elected.

"There is no denying the fact that fer some time in mid-Summer, there was a slump in the Republican campaign. But with Mr. Hughes' vigorous attack on the way the Adamson eight-hour measure was recklessly and hast-
