BY RONALD G. CALLVERT. NORTH BEND, Or., Oct. 10 .- (Spe-NORTH BEND, Or., Oct. 10.—(Special.)—There has been an evolution in business men's or trade excursions. The first, it will be remembered by those who participated in or read of their doings, were of the hip-hooray type. At each stop a crowd of spellbinders would pile off the train and proceed to unwind as they gazed into the presumably bright and eager faces of the assembled townspecule.

President Wilson and Secretary Lan-The latest order in trade extension excursions is dignity and hospitality. This excursion has now spent the first day of its sojourn in the principality of Coos, that state within a state. Portland business houses, as a rule, have sent their presidents or general managers. The train is the most thoroughly equipped of the kind. The chief effort is to beget acquaintance and good feeling rather than awe the multitude.

The excursionists spend their time visiting customers, seeing the country and inspecting industries. There is no noise, but there is a quantity of quiet enthusiasm and they have learned much of the district's golden prospects and the possibilities of this as a trade field.

harbors be interned.

President Wilson and Secretary Lansing have discussed at length the visit of a German submarine to waters adjacent to the coast of the United States and will continue their conference Wednesday. The German undersea craft which played havoc with enemy and neutral steamers off Nantucket Sunday has not been heard of since the last steamer was sent to the bottom Sunday night.

To a seemingly implied warning in the entente allied note that American submarines might be mistaken by allied warships for enemy submarines, should they navigate waters visited by belligerent submarines, the State Department announces that responsibility for the failure of a warship to distinguish between submarines of neutral

The excursion reached the Coast this morning under a special dispensation of the weather man. There was all the sunshine and warmth of a mid-Summer day. Indeed, the residents say it was warmer today than ordinary Summer weather. The day's programme began at Reedsport, where a steamer was placed at the disposal of the party through the courtesy of Warren Reed. The Eva sped them down the Umpqua River to the spick and span "white city" of Gardiner. There an hour was devoted to visiting mercantile establishments, then the return tfip was made to Reedsport, where similar visits were made.
