Furniture Business Shares in Prosperity, Too. Increases of From 20 to 30 Per Cent Reported and Better Collections Credited to Prohibition.

THE furniture business, along with all other lines of retail trade, has increased in Portland since the first of the year. Not only are the sales much heavier, but collections are better.

Prohibition is accredited with the improvement in collections. Following are some testimonials that speak for themselves: Fred Jennings, of Henry Jennings & Sons: "We are doing fully 20 per cent more business now than we did a year ago. September, 1915, was much better than September, 1916. This situation is all the more significant because it is reported that last year we were operating two stores—one at Second and Morrison and the other at Fifth and Washington. This year we have only our Fifth and Washington store. In other words, we are doing more business in our one store this year than we did in both stores last year. Prohibition has helped our sales and improved our collections."

J. G. Mack, J. G. Mack & Co., Furniture: "September shows a decided improvement. When the election is out of the way, I look for still better results." Ira Powers, Powers Furniture Company: "Our books show an increase of 20 per cent. Collections are much better and conditions are steadily improving."

William Gadsby, William Gadsby & Sons: "I am pleased to report an increase for the present year of about 25 per cent. When the war ends and ships are released to carry away the timber, I look for a period of great prosperity that will last several years."

The unprecedented vaudeville array is to be seen in the Orpheum show at the Heilig Theater next Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The joint headliners are Paul Morton and Naomi Glass in a musical satire entitled "The Little Girl in the Big City," the former star of "Everywoman," who is presenting a new sketch called "The Girl and the Kitten," under the personal direction of Martin Beck, managing director of the Orpheum circuit.

The extra attractions are Jack Wyatt's Scotch lads and lasses in songs and dances of the Highlands, accompanied by bagpipes and the tap o' drums, the entire company being clad in native kilts and tartans. Herbert Williams and Hilda Wolfen, in their comedy classic, "Hark! Hark! Hark!" and Marshall Montgomery, the extraordinary ventriloquist, in a new act in which he is assisted by Edna Courtenay.

Another popular artist in the new Orpheum show is Emma Francis, who is assisted by Harold Kennedy in novel and original dances. Mrs. Francis was one of the stars of "High Jinks" here and for several years she was a favorite on the Orpheum circuit with her troupe of boy Arabs.

PLANTS LOOK WEST

Aggressive Policy in Orient Is Urged by Publisher.

OREGON HAS OPPORTUNITY Manager of Y. M. C. A. Organ Says Beet Sugar and Other Products Can Be Marketed if Proper Effort Is Put Forth.

Eastern manufacturing companies are planning to establish branch plants on the Pacific Coast that will develop trade with the Orient. Portland is being considered by a large Chicago company which intends to build up through a branch factory here an extensive business with the people of the Far East.

F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, who predicts new trade relations between Portland and Orient.

manager of Association Men, the official organ of the International Y. M. C. A., who arrived in Portland yesterday on his tour of the associations of the country in the interests of his magazine, makes these predictions. On his way he is addressing advertising clubs and business men generally on the trade opportunities that are offered by the demands of hundreds of millions of people to whom products other than native are now largely unknown.

"America Has Much to Learn." Before a meeting of Portland Y. M. C. A. secretaries yesterday he pointed out the value of his publication as a means of cementing the membership to the association, and advocated a campaign of education on what the Y. M. C. A. is achieving in all parts of the world. He will address the Ad Club today.

"In the task of rebuilding the world America will, of necessity, take a large share financially," he says. "But America must learn how to create, develop and finance her foreign trade. We have hitherto been penny wise and pound foolish in this respect, and have much to learn, especially in regard to the exploded idea that 'What is good enough for us is good enough for the foreigner.' The foreigner wants what he wants as he wants it, not as we think he ought to want it, either as to quality or make up."

Small Profit Only Permitted. Exportation of beet sugar from Oregon and shipment of products from factories and mills are urged by Mr. Wilson-Lawrenson after years spent in service in the Far East. He points out that British India alone imports $10,000,000 worth of sugar annually in spite of a production of 2,500,000 tons. Cotton importations now amount to $220,000,000 a year, a large share of which might be sent from the United States.

In developing this trade he points out that the Pacific Coast business man must make his margin of profit small and lower the quality of his goods to meet the demands of 300,000,000 people, most of whom are limited to the bare necessities of life.

South America Is Difficult Field. Eastern factories will come to the Pacific Coast as soon as an effort is made to develop the foreign trade, he says. Some of them are even now planning for extensions in this direction. With the expansion of business to the Orient will come increased exports for Portland, because of more factories, increased demand for necessities and, consequently, more prosperity, he points out.

While there are opportunities in South America, Mr. Wilson-Lawrenson believes that invasion of that field will be a difficult undertaking for the American business man because of foreign interests already established, and points out the almost untouched commercial resources that the Far East holds for an aggressive exporter.

GIRLS PLEAD FOR PARK South Portland Youngsters Go to Council With Request. If there is any member of the City Council who is opposed to the plan of spending $60,000 next year to establish playgrounds for children in South Portland, he has not said so to delegaday and Wednesday. The joint headliners are Paul Morton and Naomi Glass in a musical satire entitled "The Little Girl in the Big City," the former star of "Everywoman," who is presenting a new sketch called "The Girl and the Kitten," under the personal direction of Martin Beck, managing director of the Orpheum circuit.
