DOMESTIC SCIENCE BY LILIAN TINGLE.

ASHLAND, Or., Oct. 18.—Will you please publish a recipe for the English fruit cake known as "Brother Killer" very truly yours, MRS. W. D. POSTER.

The recipe for "Brother Killer" (English fruit cake) has been asked for by several other correspondents, and will appear in next Sunday's Oregonian.

The salad course proper comes after the main course and before the sweet course, the idea being to clear the palate and serve as a "palate cleanser," between savories and sweets.

There are a number of fruit cocktails and other "appetizers" which may be used to begin a meal and which, especially if decorated with lettuce, have a very close resemblance to some kinds of salads; but there always is, or should be, a difference in the service, the quantity served and the dressing, which would distinguish them from salads proper.

Some kinds of vegetable salads are rightly used as "meat accompaniments." Meat and fish salads are seldom served in the salad course, being too "heavy" for use during a dinner.

The correct order for placing the flat silver may be summed up in two or three sentences. (1) "Arrange the silver in the order of use, counting from outside inward." This means that the soup spoon lies outside the knife, not next the plate.

One exceptional blouse that hides beneath an enormous price tag in a lovely box is of white Georgette crepe. The sleeves are a modification of the raglan, which, by the way, are coming in on numerous new garments.

STYLE TIPS FROM PORTLAND STORES

NEW waists, copies of imported French blouses, have come to the Portland shops along with simpler, less expensive ones. They are little less fashionable. Daintiness and simplicity are contrasted with regal gold lace and satin in the best blouses and novelty stitchings and long square collars are new features.

PORTLAND, Oct. 18.—Dear Marian Miller: I am 16 years old. Do you think I am old enough to go to dances and theaters with men? My mother doesn't want to and she says I don't care, but some of my girl friends at high school say that it isn't correct. What shall I do?

ISABELLE V. L. Tell your mother that you would like to have her take you out. Make her feel how important it is. She should be glad to be your companion. Mothers should not allow their girls to go out alone. I think they are largely responsible for much of the trouble in the world when they are careless and indifferent.

For the Orpheum, a concert, or even a picture show, it is a good idea to make up a party of about six and get a married woman to chaperon. There can be no comment then. However, at 16 I think girls should not go out very often in the evenings. If you are at school you should study lessons or music and get to bed early.

CENTRALIA, Wash., Oct. 19.—Dear Marian Miller: I am very lonely and don't know any young people. Last week I met a young man, a traveling man, who is about 15 years older than I am. He said he liked me the minute he saw me. He has a wife, I heard. I asked him and he said, "Well, yes, but she doesn't want to live with me. You think I should go out with him? He invited me to."

ALICE B. No, certainly not. Do not trust him. Keep busy and you will keep happy, and won't be so lonely. After a while someone nice will come along. But never, never, listen to a man who talks that way. He will bring you nothing but unhappiness. Better be lonely forever than to get into bad company and live to regret it.

Get some good books and read them. Join a church choir or some club or society.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Oct. 18.—Dear Marian Miller: I am a young man 24 years old. I love a girl and want to marry her. I have a steady job and the poor girl likes me and she will die if I don't marry her. What shall I do? Please advise me. AMES S.

Tell your mother that she is a dear, lovely woman and you want to prove yourself a decent fellow and be true to that way. He will bring you nothing but unhappiness. Better be lonely forever than to get into bad company and live to regret it.

Woman Is Taken to Doctor by Bystanders—Motorcycle Is Hit and One Hurt in Another Crash.

Two traffic accidents occurred yesterday afternoon, in one of which Mrs. W. J. Smith, of 228 Mill street, received a compound fracture of the right arm.

Mrs. Scott was assisted from beneath the car by bystanders and taken into the Medical building, where she was attended by Dr. John Worcester. Later she was taken to her home at 843 East Stark street.

WHAT YOU CAN MAKE AT HOME BY MRS. PORTLAND.

Why don't you have covers on your mattresses, child? Inquired Aunt Stacy, turning the full glare of her spectacles disparagingly upon me.

"What do you make them out of and how do you make them?" I questioned, knowing full well that there would be no rest from Aunt Stacy until I had made the articles in question.

"You make them of muslin or gingham or any other stout cotton goods, and you must have them in this damp Portland climate or your mattresses will all be ruined, because your bed-springs will leave rust marks on them everywhere and that will rot the goods in the mattresses. And of course the covers keep the mattresses free from dust and dirt and you can take them out and wash them when they get soiled, but it is a good deal of trouble to clean soiled mattresses."

"First you must take the measure of the mattress you want to cover—length, width and thickness—then you cut the big pieces to cover the upper and lower sides of the mattress, and the long, narrow strips for the thickness at the ends and sides. You must allow an inch or two in the big pieces for the goods shrinking the first time it is washed, and so the covers won't fit too snug to the mattress. Then you must make an allowance of an inch and a half on each piece for seams. Sew it together and the covers are made. Now if the covers are good, wide seams between all the pieces. Crease the raveled edges of the pieces together, turning each edge to the inside against the other creased edge. Then either stitch these edges on the machines or fell them over by hand. You must leave one of the side seams open of course to allow you to slip the cover off and on. You can put snaps, buttons, or hooks and eyes to fasten the opening or you can simply baste it when you put it on and rip the basting when you take it off each time to wash."

Marian Miller's ANSWERS WHO will help this girl to find her mother? She has appealed to me, and I will send out the word. Let's hope that there will be a happy reunion after many years of gladness in store for the girl.

It was on March 25, 1891, that Mrs. Lou Anderson took her baby daughter, Hazel, to the Baby Home and left her in the care of that worthy institution. The little one grew up, was taken from the home by kind people, and was cared for and educated. Now she is a successful professional woman, 25 years of age. But in all these years Hazel has had a great longing for her very own mother.

"No matter what she is, or who she is, I shall love her. I want her and will love and be glad to her forever, if she will only make herself known to me," declares Hazel.

Did the mother live and yearn for her child? Was she poor, disgraced, unhappy, heartless or what? No matter, if she is still alive, the daughter wants to find her. And so, if this should come to the notice of anyone who knows Lou Anderson, of East Portland, formerly of Wisconsin, was 25 years ago, it is hoped they will make their information known. Information may

GARAGE MAN BOUND OVER CHANGING NAME ON BOOKS TO HELP MAN AVOID DETECTION IS CHARGE.

L. I. Sullivan, a Portland garage man, was bound over to the grand jury by District Judge Dayton yesterday for neglecting and refusing to aid an officer in the service of a process.

Sullivan was found by Judge Dayton to have changed the name of L. Crandall, a Portland fireman, on the books of his shop to "L. Olson," to aid the latter to escape detection and fine for speeding on the Columbia River Highway. Crandall was the chief witness for the prosecution yesterday and admitted that at his request the garage owner had changed the name on a receipt given for auto hire.

"I didn't want the newspaper notices," explained Crandall, who had felt

BROWNSVILLE FOR HUGHES STRAW VOTE SHOWS 14 REPUBLICAN WITH LONE WILSON SUPPORTER.

H. C. Thompson, cashier of the Bank of Brownsville, who arrived in Portland yesterday, says his district is strongly Republican and will give a big vote for Hughes.

"The people up our way are not being fooled by the so-called eight-hour law," said Mr. Thompson. "They are convinced that this country right now needs a safe man at its helm, and for that reason the majority of our people are going to vote for Hughes.

A straw vote was taken at Brownsville the other day. Out of 15 votes all were for Hughes except one. That indicates how the people feel out our way."

KELSO DOCTOR IN ARMY RESERVE.

KELSO, Wash., Oct. 20.—(Special.)—Dr. Charles R. Glenn, of this city, has just received his commission as First Lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army. Dr. Glenn took the examinations in Portland about two months ago. He will continue his practice in Kelso unless called into active service.
