JOB SEEKERS BUSY

Aspirants for Legislative Bills Besiege Members.

SOME PLACES "SEWED UP"

For Chief Clerk of Senate John W. Cochran, of Portland, Unopposed. W. F. Drager, of Salem, to Get Like Place in House.

Aspirants for the various desk positions in the organization of the Senate and House are not wasting the few days left them in which to campaign for themselves before the Legislature convenes.

The woods—meaning principally the corridors of the Imperial Hotel, where all the politicians congregate—are full of them. Most of the legislators will be here in the course of the week, so naturally the candidates flock here to meet them face to face.

For chief clerk of the Senate, John W. Cochran, of Portland, incumbent in that position for the past two sessions, again has the place "sewed up," so to speak, without any opposition. His reelection will be a mere formality.

For assistant chief clerk, which corresponds to journal clerk in the House, John F. Hunt, of Woodburn, is likewise unopposed and will be elected in a walk. Mr. Hunt was assistant chief clerk last session.

For reading clerk of the Senate the contestants are Walter L. Toose, Sr., of Salem, and M. E. Blum, of St. Helens, a former member of the House. The contest appears to be close and may not be settled until the roll is called. Frank Motter, reading clerk last session, is not a candidate for reelection.

For calendar clerk, J. W. Church, of Hood River, who serves in that capacity last session, is opposed by Mr. Halderman, of Portland.

Colonel Mercer Unopposed. Colonel Mercer, of Eugene, will be re-elected sergeant-at-arms of the Senate if he wants the job. No one is opposing Colonel Mercer, who has been sergeant-at-arms for several sessions.

In the House there is no opposition, of course, to W. F. Drager, of Salem, the veteran chief clerk and dean of the legislative organization. He has filled the position so ably and efficiently for many years that his election has come to be taken as a matter of course.

For journal clerk, Merrill B. Moore, of Portland, is unopposed. It only remains for someone to move to make Charles W. Erskine, of Bend, a candidate for reelection as calendar clerk. He is opposed by Fred J. Meindl, of Portland. For reading clerk of the House, the race seems to be between Ben Huntington, of Drain, and John Withycombe, of Corvallis. Both are hopeful and it looks like a close contest. Each has had previous experience as reading clerk in one or the other branches of the Legislature.

24 SCALE MOUNT RAINIER R. L. Glisan, of Portland, in Party to Reach McCloud's Rock.

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 2.—(Special.)—R. L. Glisan, of Portland, was in the party of mountaineers that spent three days on Mount Rainier. Three women, Miss Stella Shahan, Tacoma, and Misses Lulu Nettleton and Olive Rand, Seattle, were the first women to reach Camp Muir, 10,000 feet up the mountain side, in midwinter. Twenty-four men of the party reached Camp Muir and 12 went to McClure Rock before abandoning the climb. Mr. Glisan was one of those who went to Camp Muir.

ACTRESS SAYS MOTHER IS ONE REAL FRIEND A GIRL HAS.

Charming Nancy Fair, the young star of the original "With Beds" company, is the latest Pantages protegee who promises to develop into one of the bright figures of the stage in a very short time. Miss Fair is one of the features on this week's bill at Pantages, where her impersonations of noted players and her original songs are distinct hits. With Miss Fair is her mother. "The one real friend a girl has," Miss Fair explains her presence.

TRAINING THE CHILD BY WILLIAM BYRON FORBUSH, PH.D.

"HE IS so cross that I am sure he must be getting better." Convalescent days, are, except for the lessening of anxiety, the hardest during the protracted illness of a little child.

He has always been so active and unconfined, so dependent upon his playmate for pleasure, so interested in play, that the period of recovery becomes wearisome to him and his caretaker. The amusements of the sickroom are necessarily limited. They may be absorbing, but they ought not to be exciting. They should all be suited to a sitting or lying posture, and they should not tax the eyes, the fingers or the trunk muscles. Some of them should be suited to solitary play, which is the happiest and most restful kind under the circumstances. The play-fellow may naturally hope that a few of them at least shall prove to have sufficient serial interest to be taken up with renewed pleasure day after day. Best of all, they should be used to encourage self-control, self-reliance and cheerfulness.

Plays for Little Children. Babies like things that appeal to their senses; which they can put in their mouths, handle and make a noise with. The kit of playthings for the baby's bedroom does not have to be expensive. Such common articles as smooth stones, spoons, iron keys, bells, tin dishes to clash together, rubber animals, boxes, blocks and bottles are quite as acceptable as anything the toy store furnishes. A ball suspended above the feet to induce stretching will encourage active exercise. If the baby is old and strong enough to sit up for a while a pasteboard shoe box full of bright objects such as a shoe horn, an old tea strainer, some shiny metal toys and pieces of colored cloth will in turn catch and hold his attention.

For the Kindergarten Child. For the child of kindergarten age things to construct and change are delightful. There are light nests of boxes, easy sectional puzzles, small nails to pound into bars of soap, soap bubbles to blow. By taking a small, soft pine board and driving nail holes half an inch deep close together a homemade peg board is fashioned, into which ends of matches may be set in patterns. If the child can be bolstered up, a sand box set just over the bed and snuggled up close to the child will be an inexhaustible pleasure. It should be furnished with spoons and small kitchen dishes with which to dig and mould, and clothespins, spoons, buttons and scraps of bright ribbons with which to make men and scenery.

Boys and Quiet Games. The doll is of course a standard medium of pleasure at this period. The Noah's ark represents a larger family assortment and may either stand on the sand box or sail over the bed-clothes. When Stevenson was a little sick boy he used to play, you remember, with toy soldiers on "the pleasant hills of counterpane."

Children of this age never like to play with any one thing for a very long time, and when they are ill games must be extremely short and simple. Do not remember the old, old, old lady and the boy that was half-past three" who used to play the game in which each guessed where the other was (imaginatively) hiding? Such a story-game is ideal. Stories told during this period should all be happy and soothing. A prism hung in the window to make "light-birds" is always a joy.

Plays for School Children. Youngsters of this age are increasingly querulous and demanding. Nothing seems to last. I have found a very good way to help pass the time was to do up a number of simple amusements in separate packages, marking them "to be opened at 10." "Not to be opened till after a nap," etc., so that some fresh surprise would be anticipated every hour of the day. Another way of arriving at the same end is to fasten each package to the magnetized "fish" of a magnetic fishpond and let the child fish for them with the fish-hook. The articles enclosed should consist of materials rather than finished playthings, such as sewing-cards, buttons and cardboard to make button dolls, clothespins and crepe paper for tumbleline, anagrams and other diversions. Pictures and paper with which to make and fill scrapbooks.

Things That Call for Skill. As this is still the doll-age, the child will enjoy making dollhouses and furniture out of cardboard, papering dollhouses and cutting various articles out of wholesalers' catalogues and newspapers. Children between 10 and 12 will like bead-work and weaving, tinkering with old clocks and watches, clay-modelling, coloring pictures and making small traps and whistles.

an old typewriter, practicing a musical instrument, doing pyrography, pasting pictures or painting, playing dominoes, checkers and one of the miniature baseball games. These devices are of importance, not only because they give happiness and hasten recovery, but because they are direct antidote to those vices of ill health, self-pity and inconsiderateness of others.

How to Discourage a Boy From Being Stingy. To the Editor: Ferdinand is positively stingy. He won't share his playthings. He never wants to treat his friends. It seems to hurt him to spend money. This strikes me as a bit unusual. Ought I to try to alter his attitude? So far as this trait indicates thrift and a sense of values it is encouraging. Perhaps he has rather unusual self-sufficiency and finds that he does not need many things to entertain himself. Stinginess cannot be cured in a day. In a movie scenario was a sentence that read: "The miser leans up against the wall and grows ghoulish." You can't see generosity grow. To go him to give, you must get him to love. You can encourage a friendship with some particularly generous-minded boy. You can bring to his knowledge cases of real misery. His systematic mind may be pleased at the idea of separating a small, regular sum from his budget with which to be kind and friendly. It is these cool, systematic-givers who sometimes become the wisest benefactors.

Can Impulsive Goodness Be Made More Reasonable? To the Editor: Mary is a good child, but she is good by fits and starts. I never know when I can depend on her. Do you think it is the fault of her age? She is only 8. CORDELIA G. M. Virtus has been compared to a hotel blanket. When you cover your feet it comes off your shoulders. When you cover your neck your toes suffer. It is a good blanket, but there isn't enough of it. Mary is, as you say, good, but her charities, while they cover a multitude of her sins, don't yet cover them all. Then she doesn't fully know. "Teach me what the truth is, so I can always tell it," was another little girl's attitudinal appeal to her mother. The "fits and starts" of goodness are quite human. As we grow older we get not so pitiful, and we get self-starters.

Election to Be Contested. HINTON, W. Va., Jan. 3.—Attorneys for United States Senator W. E. Chilton, of West Virginia, who was defeated in the recent election by Howard Sutherland, Republican, today instituted proceedings in Circuit Court here to oust Sutherland on the grounds that the Republican nominee in his primary campaign exceeded the limit of expenditures provided by the state corrupt practices act.

Are You Intoxicated? The question is not as impertinent as it sounds. You may be a real teetotaler and yet be "intoxicated"—that is, poisoned by the gases that come from imperfect digestion. The products of food putrefaction are taken up by the blood and often poison the entire system. Cut out meats and starchy foods for a while. Eat Shredded Wheat with milk or cream for breakfast; eat it with stewed fruits and green vegetables for dinner or supper. It will cure auto-intoxication and make a new man of you. All the meat of the whole wheat in a digestible form. A perfect meal at lowest cost. Made at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

MONEY IS LEFT FOR LIQUOR Suicide Makes Bequest of $45 for "Drinks" at His Funeral. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—"The $15 in my pocket I leave to the sailors' union to buy drinks for the sailors who attend my funeral," wrote J. G. Schultz, a sailor, who shot himself as he stood within sight of hundreds in Union Square late today. "I can't calm the hell in my heart," he added in a note to his landlady.
