We left the Master talking with Nicodemus in Jerusalem that night in April, A. D., 27. Today, perhaps eight months later, we see him on the way to Galilea and stopping at the old well massociated with the name of Jacob. What had he been doing all that time? Finding no welcome in the city, he had gone down into Judea and preached, reinforcing John's work of calling the people to repentance. He had won many disciples and had had his inti-mate followers to baptize them. And why was he going up into Galilea? The THE CONNECTION.
