Education Association Will Bring 25,000 Visitors.

INTEREST REPORTED KEEN

Estimate by Official Is That Convention in Portland Will Be One of Best on Record in Point of Attendance.

The Portland convention of the National Education Association, to be held here next July, is attracting so much attention throughout the whole country that it is now regarded as likely to be one of the biggest annual gatherings in the history of the organization. This may mean the presence of from 25,000 to 30,000 visitors and delegates in the city at convention time.

A letter has been received by the executive committee in charge of the convention from D. W. Springer, of Ann Arbor, Mich., who is secretary of the association, in which he says he has never seen so much interest in any annual convention of the National Education Association so far in advance of the convention.

Secretary to Come in March

Mr. Springer has kept a close watch on attendance and the influences that make for big annual gatherings of the association and he is credited with being well informed on the subject. What he says carries considerable weight of authority. He will come to Portland about March 10 and will give his attention to preliminary details of the coming meeting and will remain until these matters are cleared away.

Special trains are already being engaged for the Portland meeting. Three were announced yesterday. Walter R. Erwin writes from Chattanooga, Tenn., that he will bring one train, to be known as "The Educational Special," to this city for the July convention, loaded with teachers and their friends from that section of the South.

James Elliott Walmley, director of the National Education Association for South Carolina, writes that he will bring two special trains to the convention, one loaded with teachers and the other with tourists who want to see the Pacific Northwest.

Tourists Being Gathered In. The Northern Pacific is making up a train of special car parties from St. Paul, gathering in those who want to make the Northwest trip, and special arrangements will be made for the tourists to see the Yellowstone and Glacier National parks on their way to the coast. The train will reach Portland at convention time.

It was thought at first when the National Education Association convention was secured for Portland that the numbers in attendance would not be as great as at former conventions farther East, where such a long trip was not required by teachers, but indications are that the Pacific Northwest is proving more attractive than was at first expected.

DEER HUNTERS ARE FINED

Prominent Riddle Men Found With Venison in Their Possession.

ROSEBURG, Or., Feb. 8.—(Special).—Claude Riddle, editor of the Riddle Tribune and first secretary of the Oregon Sportsmen's League, and Dr. J. W. Welch, a prominent dentist of Riddle, Wednesday were fined $25 each in the Justice Court on a charge of having venison in their possession unlawfully. The matter was brought on by Thompson, Deputy Game Warden, who was returning from a day's hunt late last night, and the venison was confiscated.

Rev. J. T. Anderson, pastor of the Baptist Church at Riddle, who was also a member of the party, was not arrested. It is understood the District Attorney is now investigating his connection with the affair. Riddle and Welch entered pleas of guilty when arraigned in court and offered no explanation as to how they came into possession of the venison.

KELSO TO RESTRICT DOGS

Other Ordinances Will Bar Fourth of July Explosives.

KELSO, Wash., Feb. 8.—(Special).—A committee of the Kelso Council, consisting of J. P. Gear, George Poland and Andrew Carlson, was appointed at the Council meeting Tuesday evening to draft an ordinance to prohibit the running at large of dogs within the city limits of Kelso.

The sale or use of firecrackers and other Fourth of July explosives was done away with by the passage of an ordinance. The ordinance committee was instructed to draft a new ordinance covering the matter of peddling within this city, to eliminate conflicts between several ordinances now on the books.

A pool license was issued to Thomas McDermott upon the vote of Mayor Ballard after the Council had tied, three to three, on the motion to grant him a license.

Feminine interest as far as fashion is concerned, is now entering on hats and dresses for summer wear. Palm Beach and other Southern Winter resorts are giving the lead that will be followed later in the season by the fair ones in more temperate climes.

VALENTINES, roses, fluffy tulle bows, all of the softest pink tones, were effectively combined with lacey ferns, making an artistic foil for the dinner-dance for which Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. low for a change and prove that we aren't all selfishness. A woman I know lost her husband about two years ago and she does nothing but weep and wail about her dear departed. She calls on everyone she knows, and whenever she can find a willing ear she relates her audience with details of the death of her husband. She cornered me one day recently and I wasn't in a particularly sympathetic mood, for I thought what a lot of good that woman could do, how she could help the friendless and cheer the sick and comfort little children, and so I said: "Oh, forget the past and the troubles and get a cheerful message. You have a mission in this world to carry sunshine instead of gloom. By being kind to others and by thinking of happiness you will become happy yourself." She stared at me and then said: "Well, after all, there is some truth to what you say. I never thought of it in that light."

PORTLAND, Or., Feb. 8.—Dear Marian Miller: I am 19 years and have a nice home, but my mother is old-fashioned and doesn't like me to dress extravagantly. She won't let me have clothes like the "chickens" she sees and I think those are the only ones we young men admire. I have nice, neat, plain clothes, but no loud colors. Shall I dress in the styles of the young men like me better? Yours, ANNA B. N.

Dress neatly, becomingly and in good taste. Men will like you for yourself if you are attractive, interesting and bright. The right kind of men will not be attracted by loud clothes, but of course I don't mean you should be a frump. Have individuality and style, but never be loud. A man worth while knows that the girl who aims to attract everyone on the street is, as a rule, very shallow.

ASTORIA, Or., Feb. 8.—Dear Marian Miller: I love my husband dearly and I am very jealous of him. I am absolutely true to him and never think of any other man. Some of my women friends have men other than their husbands who admire and flatter them. Am I silly to be so devoted to my husband, or am I right? They all say I am a goose. Shall I stop being so devoted? I don't want to. Yours, MRS. L. C.

You are right to be devoted to your husband and to make his life as happy as possible. Admiration from other men isn't worth anything and nearly always brings trouble. But keep your mind broad and keep interesting, so that he will not tire of you. Be his companion, admire him and keep your own wit bright so that you will hold his interest. Don't be too jealous.

WHAT YOU CAN MAKE AT HOME

By Mrs. PORTLAND.

BESIDES the curtains to the sash on a window, many housekeepers now-a-days like to dress their windows in side and top curtains which may be drawn over the window to give greater obstruction than that made by the thin inner curtains. They may be made of crepe, chintz or other figured cotton goods, or they may be of plush, silk, rep, burlap or other heavier goods in colors to harmonize with the carpet, upholstery, or woodwork.

These side curtains are made in two straight pieces the same length as the inner thin curtains supported at the top by a rod resting on supports set a little further out from the window frame than the thin inner curtains; a valance is then put across the top of the window frame extending down far enough to cover the tops of the curtains. This valance, of course, is of the same material as the side curtains.

Another method is to make the side curtains the full length of the window frame and sew in between them and then run all three on a rod along the extreme top of the window frame.

For very narrow windows or windows in which the inner thin curtain is parted in the center, a lambrequin effect is produced by putting a valance in between them and then run all three on a rod along the extreme top of the window frame.

In choosing new material for any kind of curtains, one should always consider its wearing and washing qualities, its ability to stand sunlight without too marked fading and its liability to shrink, but in dressing up one's windows, it must always be borne in mind that one of the chief functions of a window is to admit light and air and so such an opening must not be so swathed up by the housekeeper as to prevent its satisfactorily performing this chief function.

We don't say a word of encouragement and kindness because we don't think. We don't help the poor and needy because we don't think. We may have a relative who is in trouble and who has lost her money and who never gets a chance to attend the theater or entertainment. We could send her an invitation to go to a show, could even take care of the baby while she went if we would but think about it, but we're too selfish and too busy thinking about our own pleasures or troubles. Let's think for the other fel-
