'Alice in Wonderland" Has Big Bunny and Acrobatic Ape for Playmates; Other Features Pleasing.

Whimsical animal impersonations, with the magical mysteriousness of "Alice in Wonderland," were presented by Kell, Riano and Tarran in the new bill at the Strand Theater yesterday, to the immense and gigglesome delight of the immense and gigglesome delight of all the youngsters in the audience. There is a big white bunny who dances in a fairyland of moonlight with Alice, but "most particularly" there is Tarzan in the impersonation of a big brown ape with a marvelous, temperamental prehensile tail and a set of acrobatic stunts that no reg'lar ape could ever hope to approximate. Never was an acrobatic stunt so cleverly disguised and put over with such an air of being something really out of a story book—the kind of a story book, you know, wherein animals talk and do things that are exceptionally clever and intelligent.
