Workings at Hastings, Colo., Is Set on Fire by Underground Explosion.

RESCUE HOPE IS GIVEN UP

Five Bodies Are Recovered by Rescue Squad—Many Company Officials and Inspector Are Probable Victims.

TRINIDAD, Colo., April 27.—One hundred and nineteen or more men caught in the Hastings mine of the Victor-American Company by an explosion at 2:30 this morning still were entombed tonight while rescue squads slowly were working their way through the smoke-filled mine to the main workings 2600 feet under the mountain.

A list containing 119 names of missing was given out by company officials tonight. The ventilating system apparently was not damaged.

Ninety of the men caught in the mine are miners, the others being company men. Among the latter are: Mine Inspector David Reese, David Williams, pit boss, and H. J. Millard, fire boss.

Bomb Plot Rumors Discredited. Rumors circulated here that the explosion was the result of a bomb plot were discounted by company officials, who pointed out that the mine was known as a "gas mine" and that a similar explosion had occurred in 1912.

Rescue Squad Forced Back. The first indication of trouble was a cloud of black smoke which billowed from the mouth of the mine.

NAVY ENROLLS ONLY 17 COMMANDER BLACKBURN WANTS HUNDREDS OF PATRIOTS. Urgency Great at This Critical Time, He Declares—Army Recruiters Enlist 30 Men.

Seventeen recruits enlisted in the Navy at the recruiting office in the Delium building yesterday. This is not as many as Lieutenant-Commander J. H. Blackburn, U. S. N., would like to see, for the Navy needs men now as it never has before.

"There seems to be an impression that after Oregon enlisted its quota of 800 men between April 1 and 20, no more would be enlisted," said Lieutenant-Commander Blackburn. "This is far from the case. The 800 men comprised the quota we were expected to enlist in 20 days, and we did so, but now the Navy is in great need of more men."

"I look to the patriotic young men of Oregon to respond to the country's call in this most critical time and come forward to enlist in the Navy, the Nation's first line of defense," Blackburn said.
