BY ROSCOE FAWCETT. San Francisco got away with the odd me of the series yesterday by defeating the Portland Beavers, 0-5, in a rain-aplattered matines that was amazing in the quality of pitching exhibited. Some of the pitchers looked as if they had been practicing a week. Walter McCredle used four of them—Penner, Leake, Harrington and Fitzpatrick and they kept getting worse instead of

to show him up, for they stole a total of 13 bases during the two hours and 20 minutes of bogged baseball.

Some of these thefts were due to sleepyheadedness on the part of the pitchers—Harrington, for instance—but Sepulveda had himself to blame for a number of them. Once in his hurry he overthrew second, but his boot cost nothing.

Sepulveda has a great arm, however, and if his pitchers hold runners reasonably close to the bases, there'll be no more romping around the bags such as amused the raitbirds yesterday.

San Francisco's pitching was about as bard as Portland's Southers (Charles of Southers)

as bad as Portland's. Southpaw O'Doul, a Bayside rookie, starred the game, opposed to Ken Penner, and, when Wolverton beckoned him to the rathskeller at the start of the fifth inning, he had walked five men. The score then stood 3-3. Penner was yanked at the same time, with a wake of hix hits Leake followed Penner and lasted two innings. Walt McCredie shot Southpaw Harrington into the box score in the seventh, and the ex-Denverite lived up to his name, "Wild Bill." After four walks and a couple of two-base swats, netting two runs, Scotch Mac requested Harrington to take his shower bath and young Fitzmatrick of Santa Clerk and young Fitzpatrick, of Santa Clara College, was sent out to wiggle his right wing around in the center of the diamond. Downs' single, a wild bitch and a double steal of the home blate helped the Seals to their final ally during Fitspatrick's incumbency. Stealing home on the Beavers seems to have become a habit. Three times during the week the visitors have worked this same thingamabob. Wait McCredie should give the boys a lit- Score in Morning Game Is 8 to 1
