

ATHLETES SEEM 'SOL'

Many Boxers and Ballplayers Own Big Farms.

SPENDTHRIFTS ARE FEWER

Modern Sporting Element Clings to Coin and Does Not Spend It Riotously, as Did Stars of Older Generation.

No class is much stronger for the back-to-the-soil movement than the sporting element. This tendency, however, is of comparatively recent origin. Formerly professional athletes burned up their bank accounts with the midnight kerosene. Their associates tormented them financially and left them derelicts on the sea of sportdom.

Frank Le Roy Chance is the proprietor of a citrus hacienda. James J. Jeffries' chief delight is associating with livestock. Del Howard rules a vast domain in Central California during the off-season. Rowley Elliott is a prize grower when not playing ball. Billy Sullivan has a fine orchard near Newberg. "Fighting Billy" Murray runs a ranch at Santa Rosa.

But the farmer of today is certainly looked upon as an aristocrat. "Wild Bill" Harrington, Beaver pitcher, provided some excitement yesterday. He ventured out in the rain with his new red necktie wrapped around his neck. When the tie got wet it began to shrink, and Bill almost choked to death before it could be removed.

Jack Dillon is still in a critical condition at his home in Indianapolis as a result of his recent operation for appendicitis, and his friends fear that Jack's days as a top-notch boxer are numbered.

The Portland Grammar School Baseball League has found it rather difficult to play some of the games because of the poor condition of the field at the various parts of the city. Eight postponed contests were staged Wednesday and four regularly scheduled matches were done away with.

The results of the games played yesterday are as follows: Vernon 15, Fernwood 7; Astoria 10, Richmond 11; Hoffman 4; Clinton Kelly 6; Lewellyn 3; Montavilla 3; Glencoe 4; Shattuck 15; Davis 3; Holman 9; Capitol Hill 29; Llewellyn 5; Brooklyn 3; Oakley Green 15; Peninsula 6; Central 2; Ketchikan 12; Shattuck 13; Chapman 2; Glencoe 4; Montavilla 3.

Main Street Near Park Chosen as Site—President in Washington Will Press Button for Unveiling.

An exact replica of the famous statue of Liberty in New York Harbor will be one of the attractive sights of the forthcoming Rose Festival.

Inasmuch as the theme for the entire festival this year is to be one of patriotism it is probable that many festive activities will center around the liberty statue.

The decorative plans, including the design for the statue, were prepared by Carl W. L. Lebengood, well-known Portland artist.

Both the flagpole and the statue will remain in place until after the National Education Convention in July.
