The shooting of Private Cousin, of Company H, means that the prowler who fired that shot hit every soldier in the Third Oregon. There is a tremendous under-the-surface comradeship among soldiers. To injure one means that all soldiers, whether they be reguthat all soldiers, whether they be regulars or National Guardsmen, make war on those responsible for that hurt. Hereafter it will be shoot to kill.

I venture to say that from Sunday night on until the end of this war, no private on guard will take a chance when he cries 'halt' to a night prowler or a suspicious character, and if he does not halt will ever again fire in the air. Without knowing whether Private Cousin had orders from a superior officer to first fire in the air is not known, although it is understood that Private Cousin is reported to have told those in attendance upon him when he was
