The road proposed in the Senator's bill would skirt the northern boundary of the country from the extreme north-eastern corner of Maine to the north-western corner of Maine to the north-western corner of Washington. It would follow the Pacific Coast through Washington, Oregon and California and cross the southern edge of the country from California to Texas. A highway along the Atlantic Coast from Florida to Maine would complete the circuit. Laterals Would He Built. Laterals Would He Built.

make the present generation pay a substantial share of the war expenses." Draft Bill Regarded Highly. The Senator considers the draft bill, the most important piece of legislation adopted by the present war Congress. "Under this bill," he explained, "every man of military age can be called to perform some useful service in the de-fense of the country. It will place the burden of responsibility precisely where it belongs. It will make it impossible for one family to send all its sons to other family all stay at home." Next to the draft bill, the Senator passed last year, as the most important item of military legislation. This measure applies in times of peace as well as during the war. It has reor-ganized the regular Army, increasing ite normal strength, and has Federal-ized the National Guard. It will place the country on a parity with other leadings nations in maintaining its de-fensive forces, he says. Becavert Nature 1 Edward Gager Andrews, alleged wife 69. 76 ½ 85,
