

ROSES OF EVERY KIND ON DISPLAY

Greatest Showing of Beauty Society Has Ever Had Is to Benefit Red Cross.

MANY AWARDS ARE MADE

Lateness of Season, Instead of Spoiling Production, Has Done Much to Make Flowers More Perfect, Say Experts.

The only reason you can't find a blue rose at the annual show of the Portland Rose Society, which opened at the Multnomah Hotel yesterday, is because there "ain't no such animal." They have got every other shape and color and variety under the sun in a display that sweeps in a gorgeous semi-circle of color through the northern half of the big hotel from the ballroom to the assembly hall—the greatest display the society has ever had.

In spite of the splendor of the exhibit the attendance was not so great as was expected yesterday, but the society hopes for a big crowd today, because the receipts are to be turned over entirely to the Red Cross and they are anxious to raise as large a sum as possible. The admission is 10 cents.

The show will open at 9 o'clock this morning and will continue all day and into the evening.

There are displays of all kinds from single blooms to huge bowls containing 50 or more blooms, and the multiplicity of the blossoms are as perfect as if they had been chiseled out of some huge and exquisite gem.

The lateness of the season has helped to make the display better than ever this year, by bringing out a better foliage display and producing richer tints in all colors of the roses.

Following is the list of prize awards issued by the judges last night:

LOUISE GLAUM

IN LOVE OR JUSTICE

Of Nan Bishop, vampire queen of an underworld band of wolves, who lived on the outskirts of conventionality, with all humanity as their prey! The story concerns Nan, her man and the supreme sacrifice she offered on Love's altar. The play gains in dramatic interest because the action is laid just across that imaginary line that separates the high-colored unconventional from the drab and commonplace!
