With clear skies the big 12-day assembly will convene tomorrow for the greatest year of all.

Never before has there been such a call for membership in the Chautauqua "tent city," and never before in the long 24 years of Chautauqua life at Gladstone has there been a preliminary season ticket sale which equaled that which closed this afternoon.

President Charles H. Dye, who has been closely identified with the local Chautauqua movement since 1893, will fire the first guns at 1:30 tomorrow.

Programme Ends July 22.

Programme Ends July 22.
Following his few words of welcome and Hartridge Whipp's rendition of "My Own United States," the 18-day programme will be launched, and from then on until James Goddard, the famous barttone, slings his final number on the night of July 22, there will be a continual round of festivities at Glad-

Bianca, Famous Dancer, Only Serious Number, but All Others Are Called "Side-Splitters,"

No one need complain for lack of xcellent entertainment this week in Portland's show world, for Pantages never has had a better all-round bill. outside of course, the famous fortnight of Liliputlans. On this new bill fun predominates, with enly one dignified ct on the whole list. The rest are nade for laughing purposes only.

The dignified act is that of Made-noiselle Bianca, danseuse charming, a smiling, fascinating creature of dance.

who pirouettes on her tippy toes and amazes and delights with the grace of her interpretations. She is assisted in her terpsichorean noveity by a pair of clever folk, Wilhelmina Raghnild and publication in a local paper of a let-ter from Major-General Burnett, marine recruiting station, Portland, Or., to The act that brought down the house The act that brought down the house

Ed F. Reynard returns in a capital new act. He is one of the big drawing cards in vaudeville and his ventrilocards in vaudeville and his ventrilo-quial ventures always differ from any other in that line. This season he has a dozen dummies in a courtroom scene and carries on a mile-a-minute con-versation among 'em. He introduces an attractive girl, Katherine McCon-neil, a paprika dancer, into the action with delightful effect. This act is one of the big things of the season. Alberto, a terpsichorean musician, of the big things of the season.

Alberto, a terpsichorean musician, who steps cheerly and rattles the gayest melodies out of a xylophone, is another good bet.

The closing act is a miniature musical show, "The Magazine Girls," stamped with smartness and up-to-dateness. The girls are young and pretty and work like little soldlers. Doc Baker, an excellent singer of big voice and dignified presence, is feaoice and dignified presence, is fea-ured along with dainty little Elaine ulyette, who dances adorably. All the ostumes smack of Lucile and are the ast cry in freshness and splendor. The set cry in treshness and splentar. The cenes are three, the music is catchy and it's really a pretentious number. The seventh episode of "The Neglected" ife" proves interesting.

LEWISTON, Idaho, July 9.—(Special)—Horsemen of this district are goggles at the plane and Will wandering in tuning up his violin, all of it very highbrow. It isn't highbrow, however, but a rip-roaringly funny travesty on eminencies of music, strung together with the keenest sort of patter between the serio-comic Freddie and the irrepressible Will. They sing too, and Will's imitation of Al Joison is the best yet. It's really a corking act.
