A. E. GLARK VICTIM OF AUTO ASSAULT

Divorced Wife in Car During Attack.

One of Assailants Is Mrs. Clark's Chauffeur.

SEVERAL THREATS MADE

Max and Glen Kleineau, Arrested Say They Were Not Paid to Carry Out Plan Aimed to Give Opportunity for Interview.

A new and sensational chapter in the marital troubles of A. E. Clark, prominent Portland lawyer with offices in the Yeon building, was recorded early yesterday afternoon, when he was and Glen Kleineau on the pretext that arranged for the trip.

That Mrs. Marcella Clark, his divorced wife, was probably back of the plot to assault and perhaps murder him is the announced belief of the

Mrs. Clark in Car.

Mrs. Clark climbed into the automobile just when the assault was made She got into the car near Fourth and Washington streets, evidently by prearrangement with the men, one of whom drove the machine, while the other committed the first assault.

What would have taken place in the car had not astruggle ensued between Mr. Clark and one of the assailants when at First and Washington streets which necessitated the other man's interference, is a matter of conjecture Having left the wheel to go to the aid of his confederate, the car swerved and ran into a lumber pile at First and Stark streets, where the police intervened and perhaps saved Mr. Clark's

Max Kleinau, aged 19, a member of Company E, Oregon National Guard, and his brother, Gien, the assallants, were captured and locked up. Mr. Clark was mysteriously about five years ago while in Salem one night and that affair was never cleared up. Mrs. Clark has threatened his life, he asserts, as recently as July 14 of this year, when she directed a letter to him, saying that she would endeavor to mete out "the fate that every coward deserves when he trades SPOKANE SUDDENLY COLD in the honor of a woman."

As recently as late in June Mrs. Clark, having regained the sight of both eyes, was about the city endeavoring to obtain signatures to a petition addressed to Mr. Clark, asking him to see her and to discuss their affairs.

Story Told by Victim

She is said to have spent the past three years doing practically nothing else than endeavoring to get into communication personally with him and is believed to have brought on herself great mental strain thereby. Mr. Clark, speaking of his wild ride with the two men yesterday, said: "Last Thursday or Friday a man called me by telephone, saying that his name was Richards. He told me that he was recently from San Francisco and that he had bought some real estate here, but that there was some thing wrong with the title, and he said that he wished to consult me about the matter

Trip Is Arranged.

"Yesterday about 11:30 I was in my office, as I had made an appointment with the man for noon. He again called me by telephone and said that he would come to the office. About noon he came to my office, accompanied by another man, Mr. Alexander, my former partner, admitted them and ushered them into my private office.

"The older man introduced himself as Richards and the younger man as his brother. After talking for some time he said that he had had some trouble about the lot and that he understood there was some kind of a house on it and asked me to go in his machine to see the property, saying he would leave the papers with me later so that I could handle the case for him.

Attack Made Soon.

"A large touring car was waiting in front of the Yeon building and, not suspecting trouble, I entered the rear of the machine. The older man, Glen Kleinau, got in the rear seat with me and the younger man took the wheel, We started toward Washington street and turned at the intersection toward Fourth. As we neared Fourth street the man pulled an automatic revolver from his pocket and said, 'Now you · I have you. I grappled with him and at the same time, my former wife got in the front seat with the other

"The machine went at a tremendous rate down Washington street, with the two of us fighting our best. The gun dropped on the floor of the car, and he attempted to get it and hold me at the time. We reached First and Washington streets and turned toward Stark, still going at a high rate of The man in the front of the car turned around, letting go of the (Concluded on Page 5, Column L)

Ten bodies have been picked up in the rear of the fire and the terrible agony the men endured is shown in their contorted features. Nick Muscovitch, a Russian, was found alive, his eyes burned sightless, and raving mad. His body was badly burned, all his clothing except his boots, but after getting first aid he recovered and urged the rescuers to leave him and help men he knew to be beyond him With assistance he walked to the emergency hospital and was later brought to Fernie, where he died to-

Many of those reaching points of safety were found to be temporarily sledge on the snowy upper steeps of demented from the shock. Millions of feet of logs, the logging railroad and the bush camp building, together with equipment, horses and supplies, are a total loss. Ten fatalities is the lowest estimate. The fire is now considerably checked by the heavy showers that fell last night, but if the brought to Portland by automobile and wind rises the blaze will be revived. The fires, after burning two days were well in hand vesterday, but a stiff wind fanned the dying embers.

Victim Hauled Over Snow on Coalman's Prostrate Body.

TUMBLE IS ON HOGBACK

Veteran Lookout at Summit Sees Accident and Makes Record Rush to Rescue-Hans Fuhrer, Victim, Will Probably Recover.

By making of his body a human Mount Hood yesterday, Elijah Coalman, veteran lookout at the summit for the Forestry Service, safely carried to the timber line Hans Fuhrer, a moun tain guide who had been desperately injured by accident. Fuhrer was placed in St. Vincent's Hospital last night, where it was said he probably would recover. Coalman returned to his station on the mountain top. Fuhrer and Harold LeMon, another guide, had conducted a party of Portland and Seattle people to the summiof the mountain. It was after the party had progressed a mile down the hogback in their descent that the accident happened. A woman's shoe heel brought disaster to Fuhrer At a difficult point the shoe heel came sharply in contact with the handle of an ax that Fuhrer was carrying and the blade was driven against his body, inflicting a dangerous wound. In agony Fuhrer sank upon the snow, and those nearest rushed to his assistance Mile Covered in Two Minutes

Coalman, watching the through glasses from his cabin at the ummit, witnessed the accident. He knew what to do. He threw himself upon the snow and coasted, slid and plunged across the mile of intervening space to the distressed party in two minutes. He helped the others bind up Fuhrer's wound temporarily and make the injured man as com SWANSEA, Wales, July 29.—Citizens fortable as possible. Then nel B. K. It was a rough trip for the human sledge and its wounded passenger, but it was made safely. Coalman with Fuhrer atop, was dragged over the snow to the timber line. Here they were met by L. F. Pride-

This time, however, it was quickly seen something was wrong. Mr. Pridemore saw the guide signal to the forestry lookout and saw the latter make his record slide down the mountain, and the crowd gather around the injured man lying on the snow, Then he ran to the stables, got out the horses and hastened up the mountain to meet the party on its descent. The accident occurred on the hogback just above Crater Rock, in a place well known to all who have climbed the mountain, for a tumble happens frequently at this point. When the party reached the Government Camp hotel an automobile was pressed into service as an ambulance and an improvised bed made as comfortable as possible, upon which to
