

SUMMER SCHOOLS COMPLETE SUCCESS

Portland Extension of University of Oregon Taken by Nearly 300 Persons.

EUGENE MAINTAINS RATIO

Term Will End Tonight With Lectures by Nationally Known Educators—Reception to Faculty and Plays Given.

In every particular the University of Oregon Summer school extension course, which closes in Portland today, has proved a success beyond the most hopeful prophecies.

Opening June 18 with a corps of eight instructors and providing eight courses, the popular response was so instant that three instructors were added to the faculty without delay.

The school enrolled 236 students, many of whom elected to take more than one course, and its roster shows a total of 190 students more than were in attendance at the Summer school held at the university proper in Eugene.

Visitors were many and keenly interested. Never less than 100 such were in daily attendance at the lectures, and on some days the combined attendance of students and visitors reached 500.

Eugene Ratio Maintained. It is noteworthy that the large attendance of the Portland school was gained without a subtraction from the normal attendance at Eugene.

Portland contingent at the Eugene school remained in ratio with preceding sessions. Elsewhere university and college Summer schools are reported to have shown heavy declines this term, owing to the war.

By an extension Summer school in Portland the university stands wholly to gain," declared Dr. George Rebec, director of the school and professor of philosophy at the university.

"The session proved a very fine success," continued Dr. Rebec, "and those who participated took hold with admirable spirit and interest, resolved that it shall be established as a regular institution."

The initial session, explained Dr. Rebec, was an experiment launched especially in view of the National Education Association Convention to be held in Portland and the large number of Portland teachers would not find free to go away for Summer school study.

Preparatory Work Excellent. Excellent preparatory work was done locally and the advantages of the course made widely known.

The large attendance at the almost entirely recruited from the ranks of local teachers. The exceptions noted were: Nine Sisters of Charity, from Vancouver, Wash.; three students from Astoria, Ore.; one from St. Helens, Ore.; one from Medford, Ore.; one from Jennings Lodge, Ore.; and one from North Yakima, Wash.

And this despite the fact that the attendance of Portland students at the Eugene Summer school remained as great in ratio with preceding sessions as the attendance of Portland students at the Eugene Summer school.

The extension Summer school course in Portland is of inestimable advantage to the more than 1200 teachers of Portland and vicinity, said Dr. Rebec, "and the University of Oregon is a wonderful agency for them to look to for assistance in the matter of gaining the required university credit. The present tendency, grown almost to be imperative, is for teachers to continue study."

The session was without social features, the concluding instance being the presentation of two plays by Summer school play groups at the Lincoln High School auditorium last night, "Strayed," by Miss Queen C. Lynn, and "Ghosts of the Summer School," by Miss Emma Griebel, were enacted by students of the extension course before a large audience.

Reception Tendered Faculty. Other activities, aside from the business of classes, consisted of a reception to the faculty at the Chamber of Commerce and the publication of a whimsical paper, entitled "Summer School Silhouettes," which revealed in harmless pleasantry the follies and eccentricities of students and instructors.

A more serious-minded offering was the series of six lectures given Friday nights. These were by Dr. J. Duncan Speck, professor of English at Princeton University; Dr. William T. Foster, president of Reed College, and Dr. Henry C. King, president of Oberlin College, delivered lectures in the series. The sixth and concluding lecture will be given tonight by Dr. G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University, Massachusetts. These lectures are open to the public.

The first Summer school of the university extension course held in Portland closes with an admirable record—in itself a demand for continuance.

SOCIETY GETS OWN HOME

Oregon Historical Institution to Be Moved to Auditorium.

After many years the Oregon Historical Society is going to have a real home—its very first real home.

After having been kicked around for years, being first in one place and then in another, this big institution, which possesses so much of value relating to the state's history, is going to move into commodious quarters in the new Public Auditorium.

George H. Himes, secretary, announced yesterday that removal will begin late this month. To transfer the valuable documents accumulated through the years and to preserve each intact is a delicate bit of work. Mr. Himes will supervise it and check all of the articles, included among which are 5000 Oregon newspaper volumes.

A. J. BATEMAN IS MISSING

Reward Offered for Information of Man's Whereabouts.

A. J. Bateman, a patient at the Mountain View Sanitarium, disappeared Wednesday. He came from Idaho, received treatment and was reported to be recovering from a minor complaint before he disappeared. Mrs. Bateman arrived several days ago to visit her husband, whom she now fears may meet with an accident.

The Drs. W. Hanson are offering a reward for information concerning the man's whereabouts, and the following description is given: Aged 40, weight 135 pounds, height 5 feet, spare build, smooth-shaven face, dressed in dark gray suit and wore light gray hat. Any information may be telephoned to the sanitarium, Tabor 260.

The first airship made a successful flight in 1901, and the first airplane four years later.

SOCIETY NEWS

ATTRACTIVE PORTLAND GIRL TO ENTERTAIN TONIGHT AT GARDEN PARTY FOR BERKELEY VISITOR.

Miss Laura Akin.

LEUTENANT and Mrs. Frederick A. Barker (Ruth Honeyman), who have resided for the past five years in Honolulu, spent several hours in Portland yesterday en route to Vancouver, B. C., where they will visit Mr. Barker's parents for a week before going on to an Army post in Pennsylvania, where Lieutenant Barker has been ordered to report.

Several of Mrs. Barker's former Portland Academy friends entertained her yesterday with a luncheon at the University Club. Those who planned the affair in compliment to Mrs. Barker were: Mrs. Gerald Beebe, Mrs. Whitney Morden, Mrs. Chester Moores and Miss Helen Barker.

Mrs. Barker visited Portland last year and was entertained extensively by local friends.

Mrs. R. M. Tuttle and Miss Ada Alice Tuttle gave a small garden party recently at their home at Mount Tabor. Twenty-five guests, both men and women, gathered in the garden and enjoyed the view of distant valley and snow-covered mountains that had been invisible for a number of days.

The tea table was presided over by Mrs. Behrens and Mrs. F. N. Gilbert. Out of town guests were: Mrs. C. J. Smith's house guest, Miss Ely, of California; Mr. and Mrs. Dent Mowry, of Seattle; Dr. Rebec, of Eugene University; and Miss Marian Bauer, of New York City. A fine programme of readings under the trees and songs in the house were given by Mrs. William G. Harrington and Hartridge Whipp. Mrs. Whipp was at the piano.

Robert A. Hopkins and family, of Spokane, are visitors in Portland, and are at the Multnomah Hotel.

Mrs. Philip Gevurtz, of 820 Overton street, has gone for an extended visit to Vancouver, Victoria, B. C.; Banff and Lake Louise.

Mrs. H. L. Moran, of Bristol, Colo., and her three children are visiting Mrs. Moran's mother, Mrs. P. E. Roe. Mrs. Moran formerly was Aloysia Roe. Mrs. Moran came to Portland to be present at the services on Sunday in Oswego, when her sister, Mrs. C. H. Hoke, was married. The ceremony was held at 3 o'clock in "Maryhurst," Oswego.

Rev. and Mrs. Henry Marcotte and family arrived yesterday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wiggins, 731 Clackamut.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

THE Hillsdale Community Club will give the third of its series of outdoor illustrated lectures in Gleneyln orchard Saturday evening at 8:30. The film, "When Life Begins," has been loaned by the Oregon Social Hygiene Society, and everyone is invited to see it.
