"Germany Never Forgets."

From early in 1915 until I left Germany I do not think I ever had a conversation with a German without his about a very critical situation, and naturally nothing was done with Kriege's proposition.

Britis disadvantage. Nor did the Germans and the Germans and the Germans and the ambitions of the Japanese people as a nation.

"For the time being," he said yesterday, "Japan is overwhelmingly predict the war. The country never was so prosperous. In two years Japan has been converted from a debtor nation to a creditor nation.

loud. I reminded him politely of The Hague convention, of the fact that we could not change international law from time to time with the change in the situation of the war and that Germany had furnished arms to England to use against the Boers. But he simply answered, saying, "We care nothing for treaties," and my answer, "That is what they all say," was a retort too obvious to be omitted.

The German press continually published articles to the effect that the war would be finished. If it were not for the shipment of supplies from America. All public opinion was with the German government when the warning was issued on February 4, 1915, stating that the blockade of England would commence on the 18th and warning neutral ships to keep out of the war zone.

I then called on Zimmermann at the Foreign Office, and he showed me Dumba's cablegram, which was substantially as stated above.

Of course, I immediately cabled to the State Department, and also got word to President Wilson. The rest of the incident is public property. I, of course, did not know what actually occurred between Mr. Bryan and Doctor Dumba but I am sure that Doctor Dumba cablegram in this manner, which savors almost of diplomacy as represented on the stage. If the Germans had gone on in the belief that the Lusitania note was not really meant, war would have inevitably resulted at that time between Germany and America, and It shows how great events may be shaped by
