

The correspondent passed the night on the battle field in the vicinity of the thickest artillery fire and can the thickest artillery life and can testify to its intensity. During two famous French victories, on October 24 and December 15, 1916, before Ver-dun, the correspondent was present on both occasions, and this time reached the conclusion, from the flerceness of the fire, that the French employed at least a googl number of sups least an equal number of guns.

Night as Light as Day.

The night preceding this battle was fairy-like in beauty. There was no moon, but the stars were brilliant and PARIS, Aug. 20. - The Temps says the natural effects enhanced by the constant succession of flashes from bursting shells, while all along both the French and German positions flares almost incessantly arose, making rear. surrounding area brighter than day

The only disturbing sounds were the terrifying screeches and the whistling of smaller shells and the train-like roar of larger projectiles as they tore through the air, while the dull thuds of trench torpedoes reverberated along the ground.

The French troops awaiting the order to advance were not in the slightest dismayed by the difficulties of the task confronting them. They knew that this was unsuitable terrain for attacking forces, but the fullest confidence reigned among them.

to any effort the French ingle index to extend their circle of territory around Verdun, which the Germans call the door to the heart of France. The confidence of the French proved justi-fied, for they not only pushed the German intruders back as far as they in-tended, but took many prisoners from chosen German regiments. All through the night the German artiliery had poured thousands of shells of every caliber into the roads and communicating trenches leading to the front. They introduced a novelty in the shape of 15-inch shells containing enormous shrapnel bullets, which burst overhead, scattering pieces far and wide. But the disposition of the French troops was so cleverly con-trived that they suffered little.

Verdun Heavily Shelled.

Verdun itself received hundreds of shells which simply added to the de-struction in the city. All the ground within eight miles of the front lines Mr. Wright was still meditating on was strewn repeatedly with shells con-taining a horrible new German gas known as "mustard gas," affecting the mucous membrane and any part of the body which was exposed, causing terri-ble blisters, as its base was sulphuric acid, and bringing a slow and printit ble blisters, as its base was sulphuric acid, and bringing a slow and painful death if it entered the lungs. Information comes from various parts of the line that the French have in several places gone further than was originally intended and that the prisoners taken number into the thousands.
