

FISH BUYERS COME FROM ALL QUARTERS

Ad Club Market at Third and Yamhill Is Scene of Activity.

BLACK COD IS IN DEMAND

Hitherto Neglected Variety Finds Favor—Other Sorts Called For and Supplied at Low Prices.

The miraculous draught of fishes, which all but snatched the nets and swamped the boats in Black Bay, has a close modern parallel in the tons of sea-fish which have been sold at the Ad Club's experimental cost-price fish market at Third and Yamhill streets during the last two days.

The fish company was a motley one, in which ling cod and groupers jostled the royal Chinook of the Columbia, but no more so than the incessant stream of purchasers, drawn from every district in Portland, who gathered to avail themselves of the reduced prices and replenish the raided larder.

There were folk from Portland Heights who came in their own cars, and folk from farther afield. With common accord they turned to the opportunity for patriotic remonstrance against high living costs—and the satisfaction that follows successful bargain-chasing.

Black Cod in Demand. Perhaps the most popular denizen of the deep proved to be that much-maligned but excellent fish, black cod, who, long since, was sneeringly held to be the poorest of poor relations, and was cast back into the sea when the nets brought him forth.

Food sharps of the Bureau of Fisheries took the black cod to pieces, scientifically, and discovered that he was a compact bundle of extremely palatable food units. Through a side excursion into psychology they reached the conclusion that his lack of popularity came from the untoward name he bore, and accordingly rechristened him the sable fish.

But it was black cod that he sold yesterday in the Ad Club market, hundreds of pounds of him, at 7 cents a pound. The prevailing retail price is 15 cents. Scores of people, the attendants observed, who purchased black cod Monday were first at the counter yesterday, clamoring for more and declaring that it was fine—fried, boiled, broiled or baked.

Farmers Come for Fish. Farmers who live a dozen miles out in the country arrived with gunnysacks and the orders of their neighbors, purchasing several whole fish in many instances. Hotel orders for 30 pounds and more were received. The four attendants deftly sliced and weighed and changed the cash register for hours before the purchasers showed any sign of abating.

In addition to the popular black cod, there were several other varieties, for each of which the demand was strong. Chicken halibut, which is the youngest of the halibut family, sold for 14 cents, or 7 cents under the regular market price. Red snapper sold at 6 cents and ling cod likewise. Columbia River smelt was priced at 5 cents, or 3 cents under the market, while rock cod sold for 7 cents.

Because many customers inquired for Chinook salmon and silverides, these were added to the supply yesterday, and hundreds of pounds were sold. The finest Royal Chinook red and firm, which sells at 20 cents on the market, was retained for 16 1/2 cents, or at actual cost plus the expense of selling. Silver-side salmon sold at 15 cents.

JUROR SYSTEM HIT

Bar Association to Investigate Method of Selection.

"PICKED JURIES" CHARGED

President Davis, in Asking for Committee, Points Out That All Recent Damage Suits Have Gone Against Plaintiffs.

At the meeting of the Multnomah County Bar Association last night, W. M. (Pike) Davis, president of the Bar Association, introduced a motion asking for the authority to appoint a committee to investigate the selection and qualification of jurors drawn for Circuit Court cases.

In addressing the members of the association Mr. Davis mentioned the fact that in no case for damages brought before a jury this month had a plaintiff been awarded damages.

The method used by the County Commissioners in selecting jurors in Multnomah County may be within the law, said Mr. Davis, "but when ex-Judge McMillin alluded to hand-picked jurors while he was on the bench, he certainly hit the nail on the head, and I am of the opinion that the same situation prevails today."

Three girls are selected by the Commissioners to select the jurors, said Mr. Davis, "these men are not picked in alphabetical order, as in the past, but according to the amount of real estate they own."

NOTED DOCTOR DEAD

Otto S. Binswanger Passes Away at Home.

CAREER IS VARIED ONE

Deceased Was Born in Bavaria, Served in Franco-Prussian War and Later Came to America.

Death yesterday called Dr. Otto S. Binswanger, pioneer Portland physician and surgeon, at his home, 769 Marshall street. While he had been suffering from catarrhal trouble for a number of years, his condition had not been considered serious.

Dr. Binswanger's career was a wide and varied one. Born in Bavaria, Germany, April 29, 1854, his parents, Oswald and Caroline Binswanger, determined to give their son the education that had been denied the father. After receiving his lower schooling it was decided by the young man that he would become a physician and surgeon.

He retired at the end of the first year with the title of First Lieutenant. A little later he entered the University at Erlangen, Germany, and studied medicine for about two years. It was then that he decided to come to the United States and complete his course at the University of Michigan.

On May 7, 1895, he was married to Gustaf Grayson, in San Francisco. A few years later he was appointed professor of chemistry at the North Pacific College, Portland, and held that position for 20 years, retiring two years ago to private practice, with offices in the Stevens building. He was also a member of the medical staff at St. Vincent Hospital and had a wide practice in the city.

He was a member of the Concordia Club, the City and County Medical Association and the Academy of Medicine. He was a staunch Republican politician. His widow, one son, Alvin, now stationed with the Hospital Corps at American Lake, and a daughter, Edna, of this city, survive Dr. Binswanger.
