BY GERTRUDE P. CORBETT

TO BE correct socially everyone must attend the theater party at the Heilig from 2 to 5 o'clock this afternoon. The affair is arranged as a benefit for the fund for Christmas boxes for the Oregon soldiers in France. Every Oregon boy must have a Christmas present and a message of Christmas cheer, declare the women who have planned the party.

The film, "The Bugler of Algiers," has been chosen as an appropriate and inspiring attraction and it has been donated for the occasion. The Musicians' Mutual Association has given the services of one of the finest professional orchestras in the city and the use of the theater is the gift of the management. The Honor Guard Girls have been selling tickets in the department stores and hotels and have done remarkably well. Mrs. Holt Wilson, general chairman for the benefit, said yesterday: "Everyone has been splendid. The spirit shown has made us happy and we, I am sure, will give the gifts we will send to the boys. Miss Mamie Helen Flynn and the Honor Guard Girls assisting her deserve credit for the enthusiastic help. We anticipate a capacity house at both the afternoon performances. Tickets may be secured at the theater."

A cash gift of $50 was sent in by Mrs. John H. Hall, chairman for the Cornell-Westover booth at the Rose Festival. This sum was prize money that the committee decided to give to this most interesting cause.

Boxes for the afternoon have been bought by Mrs. Holt Wilson, Mrs. W. D. Wheelwright, Mrs. Joseph Nathan Teal, Mrs. E. L. Thompson, Mrs. Lucius Allen Lewis, Mrs. Theodore J. Wilcox and Miss Sally Lewis.

Tonight the members of the First Congregational Church will honor their pastor, Dr. Luther R. Dyott, and Mrs. Dyott at a reception in the church parlors. The occasion marks the completion of ten years of service on the part of Dr. Dyott as minister of one of Portland's leading churches. The members of the choir will provide some attractive music and the presidents of the church societies will assist in receiving. The reception has been planned by the Ladies' Aid Society.

At Kader Shrine band will be the inspiration for a dance tonight at the Multnomah Hotel. The affair gives promise of being quite a smart and attractive gathering.

An organization of women deserving special mention is the Red Cross and sewing unit of the First Presbyterian Church, of which Mrs. A. E. Butterfield is president. The unit will meet this morning at 10 o'clock and the sewing will go on all day until 5 o'clock. Often women who are total strangers go in, give their services for the day and offer to assist again if needed. All the service is voluntary, but at each meeting there generally are 50 women or more. They take box lunches and work diligently. Today there is Red Cross work to be done and 100 dish towels to be hemmed for the boys at Camp Lewis. Women who at one time gave card parties and teas now give their time to patriotic work. The First Presbyterian unit is setting a standard. Other churches also are doing excellent work.

Miss Frances Sheehy will entertain tomorrow night at a recital at Woodlawn Methodist Church. Among the artists who will assist in the programme are Annabelle Berg, Doris Gardner, Alice Hewett, Merle Poulson, Geraldine Rose, Ralph Poulson and Dorothy Buckman.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Captain Sellwood's Portland Ambulance Company will give a dancing and card party Monday at 9 P. M. at Manchester Hall, 83 1/2 Fifth street, between Stark and Oak streets. No admission charged, but silver offerings will be taken for the benefit of the boys' mess fund. Everyone cordially invited. "If you do not dance or play cards, come and bring your knitting and look on," the invitation reads.

Kappa Kappa Gamma will meet this afternoon with Mrs. Hugh Henry, 629 Halsey street.

Mrs. Elliott Habersham will entertain tomorrow for Miss Elizabeth Jones, whose marriage to Maurice Doby will be an event of next Wednesday.

The first collegiate alumnae luncheon of the year will be held at the University Club, at Jefferson and Sixth streets, tomorrow at 1 o'clock. Mrs. Forest Fisher, the newly appointed president, will preside. The speaker will be Mr. Gephart, the newly appointed representative of the civilian relief of the National Red Cross. Those who are not able to attend the luncheon may hear the address at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Gephart, the former president, will be back from Seattle. The plans for the year are to be outlined and everyone in the association will be assigned to some section for work or play. Mrs. George Woodley is the chairman of the war service committee. Mrs. E. H. McCullister will have charge of the dramatic section and Miss Anna Hitchcock will have charge of the new members. Those who wish to attend must reserve places as early today as possible by telephoning the University Club, Main 695.

The first ceremonial meeting since vacation was held recently by the Kiosh Thikium Campfire group of the Westminster Presbyterian Sunday school. A surprise birthday celebration in honor of the newly elected president, Miss Alice Peaper, was enjoyed. Knowing that dish towels and cooks' aprons were needed by the Third Oregon Regiment, these girls improved the spare moments during their vacation and have forwarded the results of their labors to the soldiers.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE

By LILIAN TINGLE.

Dear Miss Tingle: I noticed in the last Sunday Oregonian a request for canning tomatoes, also your recipe, which is like my old recipe, and I find it very good.

Recently I tried another way, and may I please share it with our correspondents?

As there are bound to be some more or less imperfect tomatoes, peel and cut up as though you were preparing them to cook for dinner.

Add very little water and cook until tender. Having prepared the whole tomatoes as usual, fill jars with them and fill in with the cooked tomatoes. Season and seal and cook as directed for other vegetables. This way one will have a jar full of tomatoes.

I find your recipes very helpful. Have followed your directions and never lost a jar.

Would you please print a recipe for mustard pickles—one with only a few vegetables? I will be very grateful to you.

Many thanks for your suggestion. I hope one or the other of the following recipes will suit you:

Cauliflower mustard pickle.—Soak a large cauliflower, head down, in salt water for one hour. Break into neat pieces and boil in salted water five minutes. Drain thoroughly and place in fruit jars. For every quart of vinegar needed, mix 4 cup dry mustard, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 level teaspoon powdered ginger, 1 1/2 level teaspoons turmeric and 2 tablespoons flour. Mix this with a little cold vinegar, then combine with the rest of the halting vinegar, and simmer about 10 minutes, or until it thickens slightly. Add 2 tablespoons olive oil, and pour over the cauliflower in the jar. A teaspoonful each of celery seed and mustard seed may be added to each jar, if liked. For some tastes more sugar may be needed or less mustard. Those desiring a very hot "Indian" pickle may add a little cayenne.

A mixture of small onions, green beans and thick, "chunky" slices of cucumber is good with the cauliflower. Any of these vegetables may be similarly prepared alone. Brussels sprouts, small green tomatoes and radish seed-pods are also included in some mixed mustard pickles.

Mixed mustard pickles.—One quart small pickling onions, 1 quart florets of cauliflower, 1 quart thick slices of cucumber, 1 quart sliced green tomatoes, 3/4 cup tiny chili peppers (less for a mild pickle), 1 1/4 quart vinegar, 3/4 pound English mustard seed, 4 pound ground mustard, 2 tablespoons turmeric, 2 tablespoons celery seed, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup brown sugar. Soak the vegetables over night in "water to cover," in which one cup of salt is dissolved. Drain and rinse in cold water. Boil the vinegar, seeds and sugar five minutes. Mix the mustard, turmeric and flour in a little cold vinegar, combine with the hot vinegar, and cook until it thickens. Add the drained vegetables and let them just heat through, then pack into glass jars and seal. More mustard and sugar may be used if liked.
