argument that dirigible balloons are a war is a fact—a great and tragic fact failure as offensive weapons of war. —for them, and they know it. There seems to have been a simultaneous attack on both the southeast the aerial and artillery defenses of England and to have dropped bombs on London. On its return over France fleet was scattered by airplanes and by anti-aircraft guns, and five of its units were either shot down or forced to descend, and their crews were killed or taken prisoner. Of the 100 Zeppelins built by Germany, twothirds have been lost in the war, while probably six more were wrecked by cident or in experiments.

Great as may be the uses of the dirigible airship in peace, it is useless for offensive war. Unlike the airplane, it is a large target for artillery, and cannot maneuver fast enough to avoid shots fired from the earth, airplanes can fly all around and above it, piercing its envelope with machine gun bullets, while quickly dodging shots from its guns.
