$1000 Subscribed to Keep Premier Western Stock Exhibit in Portland.

Scattle and Spokane Ready to Take Event if Portland Falls Down. Exhibitors Expected to Incorporate This Year.

In an effort to save the Pacific International Livestock Show to Port-land, and to cause Portland to keep her position in the forefront of the liveslock industry in the Northwest, the Portland Hotel Men's Association yes-terday led off a subscription list with $1000. During the remainder of the week an additional $11,500 must be

The sales at the Portland shows have brought together the breeders who have money to invest in their business, and in consequence this city has become recognized as the center of the livestock interests, as well as the home of the largest stockyards and packing plants of the district.

Breeders Plan to Incorporate. The Liestock Show was to have been incorporated last Fall by the breeders, who were willing to finance the building of a large pavilion at Portland. The war temporarily prevented that being done, but the assurance is given that the incorporation will be made at the Livestock Show to be held November

If Portland rallies to the support of the breeders at this time and finances the $11,500 now needed, the show will be permanently located here. When the pavilion is ready it will be tendered free of charge for an annual horse show, the plan being to have the horses exhibited at night. Money Needed for Premiums.
