Hood Orchardist Gives Convincing Proof of Value of Intensive Cultivation.

CLATSOP DISPLAY TIMELY

Grammar Grade Pupils Enjoy Afternoon Viewing Fruits of Oregon Soil—Country Fair Will Be Big Feature Tonight.

Prunes of every size and shape, representing every pack in the Pacific Northwest, are included in an attractive exhibit installed at the Land Show in the Public Auditorium yesterday by Robert C. Paulus, manager of the Salem Fruit Union and also president of the Oregon State Horticultural Society.

Few residents of Oregon have knowledge of the magnitude of the prune-growing industry in this state and the extent to which it is growing. According to the estimate of Mr. Paulus there are in the state 1000 prune-growers, caring for orchards aggregating 15,000 acres and operating between 400 and 500 evaporators.

"The prune crop this year will not exceed 20,000,000 pounds, as against 1,000,000 pounds last year, but the price this year has averaged $30 a ton more than in 1916, when the prevailing price to the grower was approximately $125 a ton," said Mr. Paulus yesterday.

"The 1916 prune crop yielded approximately $3,000,000 gross in this state, while the lighter yield, even at the higher prices now prevailing, will this year bring the producers probably not more than $1,750,000."

Gus Miller, of the Hood River apple district, with his exhibit of apples prepared to give visitors to the Land Show unquestioned proof of the possibilities of intensive cultivation coupled with concentrated care of the land and proper care of a limited acreage of Oregon ground. Mr. Miller is the owner of a tract of nine acres, situated about five miles from Hood River on the east side.

With the assistance of Mrs. Miller and two children, he personally attends to cultivating the land and harvesting the crops. He raises only Yellow Newtown and Spitzenburg apples, using the space between the trees to grow strawberries, raspberries and such stock feed as he requires.

Land Yields $300 Per Acre. This year he sold $1300 worth of strawberries alone. Including the sale of his apple crop and other products of the nine acres Mr. Miller said his receipts for the year aggregated $2700, or $300 an acre.

During the San Francisco exposition, J. P. Moat, owner of a ranch near Vancouver, B. C., was attracted by an exhibit of Toggenburg goats from a Southern Oregon farm. Yesterday Mr. Moat passed the day viewing the many attractions at the Land Show, preparing to leave last night for Riddle, where he will purchase a carload of these goats, valued chiefly for their milk, and ship them to his British Columbia ranch.

Mr. Moat has arranged with a Vancouver cheese factory to use the milk supply from his herd, the same to be mixed with cows' milk in the manufacture of a new high-grade cheese, which he expects to introduce as a war-time substitute for the more expensive brands now supplied the market.

Anyone feeling that he cannot afford a Thanksgiving turkey this year and does not wish unduly to test his appetite should avoid visiting the Clatsop County exhibit at the Land Show. Yesterday Ben S. Worsley, who is in charge of this display, arranged a seasonal Thanksgiving exhibit, consisting of a large turkey, ready for the oven, surrounded by several gallons of native Clatsop County cranberries.

Youngsters Visit Show. More than 100 grammar grade pupils of the Portland public schools were the guests of the Land Show management. Of that number, 70 came from the Felling School, accompanied by two instructors, Miss Porter and Miss Segal. Miss Strange chaperoned 33 of her pupils from the Joseph Kellogg School, Sixty-ninth street and Powell road. Pupils of the public schools are admitted to the show free every afternoon between 2 and 5:30 o'clock if they are accompanied by their teachers.

"Tubs" Fair Tonight's Feature. A typical country fair, with "tubs" and booths from which all sorts of wares will be dispensed, will be the "headline" attraction of the Land Show programme tonight. The exhibitors, wishing to do their bit towards contributing to the Christmas box benefit for the Oregon boys at the front, have made donations of their exhibits for the fair and will assist in the special offerings on the programme.

Pretty girls will sell lemonade, popcorn and peanuts and several of the city's cleverest salesmen will appear as spellers. A number of leading musicians will take part in the "small-town" orchestra and others will sing. Miss Mamie Flynn will have charge of the music programme.

the work is being carried on. They are men who have families and cannot go into the lumber camps. They work in the harvest fields and at other work in their own communities during the right seasons of the year for that work, and they find means of keeping their families from starving during the winter by employment on the roads, or such other work as they may find in the immediate vicinity of where they live.

DOORS OPENED WIDER

MORE THAN 400 SOLDIERS FROM BARRACKS HAVE INVITATIONS.

Hundreds of Hospitable Citizens Ask Permission to Make "Boys" in Camp Happy on Thanksgiving Day.

The "take two soldiers home to Thanksgiving dinner" campaign suggested last Monday in The Oregonian is carrying the city by storm. More than 600 lads in uniform already have been invited by hospitable Portland people to share Thanksgiving fare with the family, and no diminution of the generous tide has yet been noted. Nine hundred men will have leave that day.

"They are pouring in their invitations," said J. P. Jaeger, one of those who fostered the plan, "and in Mr. Boynton's office, where the requests are being entered, a special staff works until 8 o'clock at night to take care of them. I have been called up by telephone at all hours of the day and late into the night by people who wanted to share their turkey with our boys."

Today a committee will visit Vancouver Barracks, where arrangements will be made for the sending of postal cards announcing the prospective guests to homes that have adopted soldier sons for Thanksgiving dinner.

Among those who telephoned invitations to two soldiers each in yesterday's hundreds of responses were Dr. J. P. Tamiasle, Mrs. C. S. Jackson and E. C. Johnson, president of the Portland Seed Company.

R. P. Boynton, who is in charge of the detail work, may be reached by telephoning A 6131 or Main 2370. Each request will be immediately forwarded and will be forwarded to Vancouver Barracks. Invitations for one guest are not accepted, for the obvious reason that the "boys" will be more at ease if some comrade accompanies them.

HIGHWAY WORK IS FIXED

NUMBER OF MEN NOW SET AT MINIMUM FOR WINTER.

State Highway Engineer Nunn Replies to Recent Protests of Lumbermen and Taxpayers' League

SALEM, Or., Nov. 14.—(Special)—The number of men working on state highways is now reduced to a minimum and will be kept at that point throughout the winter, according to a statement by State Highway Engineer Nunn Tuesday, when asked as to what action will be taken toward recent protests of lumbermen and the State Taxpayers' League against using men on state work who might be used in Government service elsewhere.

"My instructions from the commission have been to avoid as far as possible interfering with local conditions as far as labor is concerned," said Mr. Nunn. "In fact, I have been advised to even take polls of the men employed in the highway camps to determine to what extent they might be of use in lumber camps, mills and other industries."
