

FALING WILL CASE WITNESS UNSHAKEN

Friend of Aged Woman Steadfast in Denial of Mental Derangement.

EXAMINATION TO CONTINUE

Disappearance of $50,000 Denied Inventory Said to Account for All of $500,000 Estate — Mrs. Chatlin Denies Witnessing.

After a brief session yesterday morning Judge Tazewell continued the Xarifa Faling will contest until this morning. Mrs. Etna B. Chatlin was still on the stand yesterday, and will again be under cross-examination today. Mrs. Chatlin's present name is Mrs. Etna Fuller, but she uses her maiden name because of her profession.

As on the two previous days she occupied the stand, the witness clung steadfastly to the testimony she gave on direct examination, and not once could counsel for W. Tyler Smith, who is seeking to break the will, gain from her any statement or admission which might indicate that Mrs. Faling was mentally deranged during the last two years of her life.

Question after question touching upon alleged delusions held by Mrs. Faling were hurled at the witness, but each time she denied any knowledge of conditions outlined in the questions. These questions are being taken from sworn statements which are said to have been made by others who will appear later as witnesses for Dr. Smith.

No Snakes on Bed.
"Did you ever hear her talk about snakes being on the bed?" she was asked.

"No," was her instant reply.
"Ever hear her talk about horses or wagons or cows being in the room?"

"No."
"Did you ever hear her talk about men being in the room?"

"No."
"Did she ever imagine you were up on the curtains, living up in one of the curtains?"

"No."
"Did you ever hear her talk about rats being on the bed?"

"No."
"Do you recall the occasion one morning when she would not eat her breakfast and she was asked what was the matter, she answered, 'What difference does it make if you have wild peacocks in your forest?'"

"I never heard that."
"Do you remember one time when a Mrs. Warner called and Mrs. Faling thought she was a policeman?"

"No; I never heard of such a thing."
Little Drank Beer.

"Did she ever say to you, addressing you as her daughter, 'Lillie, Lillie, you ought to be ashamed of yourself; shut off the gas and come to bed. You ought to be ashamed to sit up and drink beer with all those men?'"

"No, but she was always walking about turning the gas out at night after she went to bed."
"Were you ever there when Mr. Mead came and she did not know him?"

"No; she always knew Mr. Mead."
"Always greeted him with a smile and glad to see him?"

"Yes; I never saw her when she was not."
At another point in her examination the witness told of how women usually came to visit Mrs. Faling about mealtime. Asked if she thought they went there for the purpose of getting a meal, the witness replied that such had always been her impression.

With reference to the alleged disappearance of some $50,000 of assets of Mrs. Faling's estate, C. L. Mead, who, with Thomas N. Stinson, is one of the principal legatees of the $500,000 estate, said that the court inventory, now a court record, would show that every penny belonging to Mrs. Faling has been accounted for, including the diamonds and other jewelry, of which much reference was made during the hearing Wednesday afternoon.

After repeated efforts had been made Wednesday to show that the witness had practiced writing Mrs. Faling's name several days before the will was executed and after counsel for Dr. Smith had announced an effort would be made to show that she guided Mrs. Faling's hand when the latter signed the will, the witness yesterday, under careful cross-examination, denied that she was even in the room when the will was signed.

She testified that after Dr. Moreland, Miss Lydia Metzger, Mr. Mead and others had entered the room for the purpose of having the will signed she went to an adjoining room until after the legal formalities had been completed and did not return until Mr. Mead was folding the will up and putting it in his pocket.

WASTE BRINGS $5.60 A TON

City Pays Money to Burn Garbage; Now to Get Cash for It.

The city hereafter is to receive $5.60 a ton for vast quantities of waste food-stuff now being burned daily at the city incinerator. Bids for the sale of this food for use in feeding animals were opened yesterday.

Four bids were received. The highest, $5.60 a ton at the incinerator, was

A YOUTHFUL TAG SELLER OF YESTERDAY.

George Tillotson.
Who yesterday could resist the plea of "Please buy a tag for soldiers' Christmas fund" when it came from the 5-year-old blue-eyed lad who sold at the corner of Fifth and Alder streets? Little George Tillotson, the son of Mrs. L. P. Tillotson, of 678 East Ankeny street, all dressed up in a dark blue sailor suit and white cap, ranked among the leading individual sellers yesterday. He sold 175 tags all by himself, only having to refer to mother, who stood near by, once in a while regarding the correct amount of change.

"If this lad were older it is certain that he would be one of the first in the service for his country," said Ferdinand Reed, who watched the child's efforts.

submitted by G. N. Cloyes. Other bids were: L. H. Willard, $3.90 a ton; Kraber Bros. Co., $3.55 a ton, and Cochran & Johnston, $3.15 a ton. Not only will the city receive considerable money, but great quantities of food will be conserved and the city will be at less expense to dispose of the garbage.

In explanation of the announcement that Universal has discontinued the making of short reel films, General Manager Goldstein asserts that Universal has about 200,000 on the shelf ready to release. He isn't sufficiently explicit as to whether the 500,000 represents feet of film, reels or subjects, but this figure applied to the last two would represent much more than the entire output of the film industry to date. However, the point is that Universal will be distributing one and two-reelers for some time and when the supply is exhausted will resume studio operations.

"I made these with one small can of Cottolene"
A housekeeper's real experience

Drawing (from the original photograph) by Benj. Story

I was surprised to find how very much farther Cottolene went than other shortenings I had used.
My one small can of Cottolene made all these perfectly delicious things:-

- 1 Marble Cake
- 13 Biscuits
- 13 Tea Biscuits
- 1 Mince Pie
- 1 Apple Pie
- 2 doz. Tarts
- 8 Cup Cakes
- 4 doz. Cookies
- 1 Thanksgiving Pudding
- 1 doz. Croquettes (deep-fried). This Cottolene can be used over and over for other deep-frying.

What I Saved
I found that I had saved the entire cost of my Cottolene and 22 cents besides.

Recipe for Thanksgiving Pudding

$\frac{3}{4}$ cup Cottolene $\frac{1}{2}$ level teaspoons salt $\frac{1}{2}$ cups seeded and 1 cup molasses 1 teaspoon cinnamon shredded raisins 1 cup buttermilk $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon cloves $\frac{1}{2}$ cup currants 3 cups flour $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon allspice 3 tablespoons flour 1 level teaspoon soda $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon nutmeg for dredging fruit

Cream Cottolene. Add molasses and milk. Sift flour, soda, salt and spices together; add gradually to first mixture, beat thoroughly. Mix raisins and currants; dredge with flour and add to batter; mix well. Turn into well-greased tube mould; fill two-thirds full; place on well-greased cover. Surround with boiling water. Steam three hours. Serve with hot sauce.

I decided my small can of Cottolene should make a Thanksgiving feast of "delicious economy."

Until I tried I would not have believed anyone could enjoy making a short purse go so long a way.

I thought I knew something about Cottolene before I made this particular experiment. But now I can tell you almost anything you want to know about Cottolene: How rich it is. How much farther it goes. What famous results it brings in your "fine" as well as your "every-day" baking and frying.

The recipes which I chose were inviting and inexpensive.

Then I used one-third less of Cottolene than I would have used of butter or other shortening called for in the recipes. And I was so proud of the results, including the economy, that I had my Thanksgiving feast photographed.

Of course the "proof of the pudding" is in the eating—not in the photography. And if these cakes, cookies, pudding, pies and tarts, croquettes and biscuits could speak, I am sure they would all say "Use Cottolene." For each one has its individual story of richness and wholesomeness; of crispy, flaky flavoriness; of cooking more appetizing and digestible than ever before. All linked together in delightful economy.

For all were made without expensive butter—with one small can of rich, economical Cottolene.

And, now, you too can prove this "delicious economy" in your baking. You can easily discover for yourself:

- (1) That Cottolene makes cakes which butter might well be proud of.
- (2) That Cottolene takes the place of butter and all other shortenings in baking and frying.
- (3) That foods "deep-fried" in Cottolene are wholesome and digestible.

And I think you will find as I have that nothing can take the place of Cottolene economy in your kitchen.

On this page I am giving the recipe I used for my Thanksgiving pudding. Try it and see how delicious economical cooking can be.

MARSHALL AT LEWISTON

Exhibitors Sell Stock With Estimated Value of $250,000; Many Cattle to Come Here.

LEWISTON, Idaho, Nov. 15.—(Special.)—Vice-President Marshall arrived from Pomeroy at noon today, coming overland by automobile. At 3 o'clock this afternoon he addressed the assembled stockmen, ranchers and visitors to the Northwest Livestock Show. He assured his audience of over 5000 people that he is convinced the United States has acted wisely and well in entering the war, and from a study of history he is equally sure there is but one conclusion for this great struggle—victory for democracy.

There was a record crowd at the grounds all day, the number of visitors constantly increasing up to the time set for the crowning event of the show, the address by Mr. Marshall.

Exhibitors are busy this evening getting their stock in shape for shipment of the exhibits going to Portland to the Pacific International Show to be opened there Monday.

All fat stock brought to the show has been sold, and some of the exhibitors were even induced to part with their prize winners on account of the fancy prices offered. It is conservatively estimated $250,000 changed hands for stock at the exhibition closed today.
