

LONG PERIODS OF COMA FREQUENT

Nurse of Late Mrs. Faling Testifies Patient Had Numerous Spells.

WITNESS IS ON HER GUARD

Plaintiff's Attorney Using Much Time Discussing Medical Terms With Dr. Carlo Visetti, Who Attended Woman in Last Days.

Mrs. Etna Chattin-Fuller, Mrs. Faling's trained nurse during the last years of her life, again matched wits with Attorney Coy Burnett when she was recalled to the witness stand yesterday afternoon to testify in the contest over Mrs. Faling's will. She had just testified that Mrs. Faling was recovering from a paralytic stroke of the right arm when she was called into the case as a nurse.

"Isn't that taken to indicate that there is a clot on the brain?" asked Mr. Burnett. "They say it does," replied the nurse. Further attempts of Mr. Burnett to get her to admit that she as a trained nurse should know whether or not such a paralytic stroke is known as direct evidence of a brain clot were ineffectual. She stuck to her statement that she had heard it only as a report.

Continuing his cross-examination regarding Mrs. Faling's mental and physical condition from 1914 to 1917, the latter year being the year of her death, Attorney Burnett directed from Mrs. Fuller the statement that Mrs. Faling, during those years, was frequently a victim of periods of coma which lasted for as long as three days. "She was not sound asleep all of that time, but often she would lie still for so long that I had to strike her to see if she were still alive," testified Mrs. Fuller. "Sometimes she would get up for an hour or an hour and walk to bed and sit up and then would go back to bed and relapse into sleep."

The nurse said that Mrs. Faling had several such attacks in 1915 and others in 1916. The longest period she ever went without being subjected to these periods of dormancy, said Mrs. Fuller, was from June to October, 1915, the period embraced by the making of the will.

These paralytic strokes of the right arm and the consequent periods of coma, continued Mrs. Fuller, began to affect Mrs. Faling's speech, hands and feet in more or less aggravated form from early in 1915 up to the time of her death.

Law Point Disputed. Mrs. Fuller testified with some feeling regarding the physical misfortunes which overtook Mrs. Faling. In spite of all precautions taken, paralytic attacks, or pains, or less aggravated forms, fell from a cot which resulted in a broken hip, an aggravated attack of a gripe and later by paralysis and neuralgia. She then sought rapidly by a fall from a cot which resulted in a broken hip, an aggravated attack of a gripe and later by paralysis and neuralgia. She then sought rapidly by a fall from a cot which resulted in a broken hip, an aggravated attack of a gripe and later by paralysis and neuralgia.

Major portion of the afternoon was consumed in argument between John F. Logan, attorney for Thomas H. Strong and C. L. Mead, chief beneficiary under the will, to submit to the court the instrument on the ground that he is the surviving kin, as to whether the court should force Mrs. Fuller, as a witness for the sustaining of the will, to submit six letters showing specimens of her handwriting.

Mr. Logan asserted that a rule of law made it necessary that Mr. Burnett recall Mrs. Fuller as his own witness if he wanted this handwriting, in which case, under the same rule of law, Mr. Burnett would be bound by the evidence and testimony resulting. Mrs. Burnett contended that the peculiar circumstances surrounding the drawing of the will should permit him to call on Mrs. Fuller to produce this evidence even while she is a witness for the other side.

Judge to Rule Today. Mr. Burnett, in brief, informed the court that he wanted these letters written by Mrs. Faling, and that he might prove that the signature attached to Mrs. Faling's will was in a handwriting much larger than that used by Mrs. Faling at all other times. He asserted that Mrs. Fuller's handwriting was much larger than Mrs. Faling's and that he would attempt to prove by these specimens that Mrs. Fuller had guided Mrs. Faling's hand when the will was signed.

The morning session and part of the afternoon were devoted to the continued cross-examination of Dr. Carlo Visetti, Mrs. Faling's physician from the Fall of 1912, until her death, July 5, 1917. "When you took Mrs. Faling's case did you know that two mental experts had pronounced her hopelessly insane?" asked Mr. Burnett.

"I did not and never heard of it," was the witness' quick reply. "Did you know that Mrs. Faling was a notorious fact around the Sargent Hotel that Mrs. Faling was regarded by everyone there as mentally deranged?"

Witnesses Will Be Recalled. Dr. Visetti's office was in the Sargent Hotel at that time and was on the same floor on which the apartment occupied by Mrs. Faling was situated. "Did you know that before you came into the case Mrs. Faling had been kept for months in a cottage in Irvington because of her hopeless insanity?" resumed Mr. Burnett.

of economy now to turn to your cook book and study the subject. Did you know that you can purchase more energy in dried fruits for the same money than lean meats? You may have used dried fruits before, but are you using them as wisely as you should for the most economical diet? Prunes, figs, dates, apricots, apples and peaches do not exhaust the range of choice among dried fruits. Yet how many even of these is it your custom to serve?

Learning to Know Cornmeal. STOCK CAREER ABANDONED FOR VAUDEVILLE.

Hubia Pearl.

Starring in stock grew tiresome to Hubia Pearl, the distinctly blonde singing comedienne, who is one of the hits at Pantages this week, and she turned her skill toward vaudeville. This is Miss Pearl's first appearance in vaudeville here. For several years she was leading women with the Standard Stocking Company, an organization that was popular in the principal cities of the East. But the sameness of stock life palled on Miss Pearl, and since she has entered vaudeville she has been scoring a greater hit than she did on the dramatic stage. While Miss Pearl is heard in her own songs, it is her first step in the musical field and a successful one.

putting the knowledge to practical use. What do you know about cornmeal as a breakfast food? How long is it since you have served cornmeal mush? What do you know about the other uses of cornmeal? How long is it since you've served johnny cake, fried mush—as a dessert with syrup, its particularly delicious—cornmeal cooked with raisins and cream, Indian pudding, cornmeal polenta and cornmeal and oatmeal wafers? Add at least some if not all of these really delicious dishes to your family bill of fare.

If you wish recipes for the use of cornmeal, write to the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Farmers' Bulletin No. 665, and it will come to you promptly. Not only will this pamphlet be a valuable addition to your recipe book, but it may widen your diet at a saving that will be most pleasing.

Pairing Vegetables Thin to Save. Now more than ever it is wise for the housewife to give thought to the waste of good food that hurried preparing for the table sometimes makes. A big percentage in table costs. No directions are necessary—each cook must consider the problem in her own kitchen herself. For example, the careless pairing of potatoes may cause a loss of perhaps 30 per cent. Scouring potatoes will reduce the waste. Consider your other vegetable service in the same light. Thus you will save money for yourself, food for the Nation and do your bit effectively at home in your own kitchen.

TACOMA WOMAN INJURED Mrs. Catherine Cowell Jumps From Auto in Path of Train.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 20.—(Special.)—Mrs. Catherine Cowell, wife of George Cowell, of Seattle, jumped from an automobile in front of a moving train in Paylup today, and sustained serious, if not fatal injuries.

Mrs. Cowell, her husband, and two friends were traveling near the track when they saw a train approaching. Mrs. Cowell evidently did not think they could pass the crossing safely, and jumped. The machine shot across without mishap. There was no flagman at the crossing and the driver thought the track was clear.
