Thomas N. Strong Reviews Business Dealings With Woman as Early as 1880.

MONEY HOARDED SECRETLY

Two Excerpts From Memoranda Kept by Mr. Strong Are Read Into Records by Lawyers Seeking to Break Will.

Interest in the Faling will contest before County Judge Tazwell yesterday reached its ebb tide so far as the general public is concerned. The meager crowd of spectators found more than one cause for yawning before the day was over as apparently insignificant detail after detail followed each other in monotonous order. Two women auditors broke the tedium by industriously plying their knitting needles most of the afternoon.

Thomas N. Strong, Mrs. Faling's attorney for 40 years and one of the chief beneficiaries of the will, was on the witness stand all day under direct examination by his counsel, John F. Logan. His testimony embraced a mul-titude of business transactions pertitude of business transactions performed for and consultations held with Mrs. Faling since 1880. A minute system of bookkeeping, in which these various incidents were written in detall, was in Mr. Logan's hand as he asked the witness various questions pertaining to checks and corresponding entries in the books. Mr. Strong's memory was keen as to these in their most particular phases.

Money Hoarded Secretly.

The witness was positive that he had never acted in any important matters which concerned Mrs. Faling without first consulting her, even after she gave him full power of attorney to attend to her affairs in October, 1914.

One part of Mr. Strong's testimony pertained to Mrs. Faling's ability to save money rapidly and secretly. One day she came to him chuckling, said Mr. Strong, with the information that she had certificates of deposit for $100,000 which she had in Ladd & Tilton's bank. Her account, so far as Money Hoarded Secretly. ton's bank. Her account, so far as Mr. Strong's knowledge went, had been kept at the First National Bank. Two excerpts from the memoranda humored because of her nervous fears. The first, dated May 18, reads:

CITY AMBITIOUS TO FISH

Commissioner Kellaher Is Negotiating for Another Boat. Although the Port of Portland has turned down the request of the city for use of the pilot schooner Joseph Pulitzer for a fishing boat off the Oregon Coast, the city has not given up the ambition to fish. City Commissioner Kellaher said yesterday he has negotia-tions under way for another boat and may close a deal for it within a few

The plan has been to send a municipal fishing hoat to the fishing shoals of the Oregon Coast and catch the black cod, salmon and other fish sold on the municipal market.

Guardsmen to Get Rifles.

CENTRALIA, Wash., Dec. 19.—(Special.)—When Company G. Third Regiment, Washington State Guard, was equipped by the state, part of the men were assigned rifles and part carbines. The carbines were returned resterday and a requisition was made by Lienand a requisition was made by Lieu-tenant T. H. Greenwood for rifles, so that the company's armament will be uniform. The new guns are expected the last of this week. The local company was inspected at the armory tonight by Major George Robertson, of Montesano. It was the company's last drill until after the holidays.

in the auditorium of the Young Women's Christian Association. The picture is $x27 feet and is a reproduction in color of the hills and plains of the ancient city of Bethlehem, introducing the shepherds in life figures and showing the Magi with their camels. The public is urged to come in and view the picture, and the lobby and restrooms are open to tired shoppers who wish to enjoy a few moments of quiet. The Christmas trees will be illuminated every evening until after New Year's.

One of the interesting parties given by the Giris-Who-Want-to-Help was given at the clubrooms of the Young Women's Christian Association last evening by the members of the Wegfaf Club (where every girl finds a friend). The girls were asked to come dressed as children, each bringing toys for the Christmas tree, which were gathered with great ceremony and will be given to the Children's Aid Society.

A schedule of auxiliary meetings will be arranged and placed in the head-quarters rooms and a bulletin of all entertainments and benefits, with their respective dates, will be posted to prevent conflicts and duplications. Representatives resentatives of newly organized auxiliaries are expected to attend. "The war does not stop for holidays, and neither should we," said the teachers, and they voted to work at the Red on Friday night. A small admission
