OWNER ARRESTED

Mrs. Robert Berger, Called On to Explain, Declares Complainant Is "Sore."

P. A. ELVIN NURSING WOUND

Judge Rossman Decides That While "Every Dog Is Entitled to One Bite." John L. Must Be Muzzled to Prevent Trouble.

John L. Sullivan, builded extraordinary and protector unusual to Mra. Robert Herger, prominent clubwoman and social worker, exercised the old rule of law that "every dog is entitled to one blie" when he took a chunk out of the left lower limb of P. A. Elvin the other night, but John L. also got his mistress into trouble thereby.

Vexed at the unseemly conduct of John L. Mr. Elvin hied himself to the Municipal Court and got out a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Herger, former president of the Portland Coterie Club and the Overlook Club, and she was in court yesterday to explain why she court yesterday to explain why she maintained a vicious dog. She did. She said Mr. Elvin was

"sore."
Mr. Elvin explained that when he went out to post a card the other night John L. leaped out of the Berger home, 198 Melrose drive, and forthwith bit his leg, greatly to his distress and humiliation. Not purposing to stand for this sort of thing again, he said, the decision to have Mrs. Berger arrested was reached at a council of war in the Elvin home and was executed immediately.

Previous Trouble Disclosed.

Judge Rossman asked Elvin whether Judge Rossman asked Elvin whether the whole irouble grew out of the at-tack by John L. or if it was the result of previous trouble, to which Mr. Elvin replied that some three years ago Mrs. Herger had helped to enjoin him from building his residence close to the side-walk. There had, he admitted, been some lil feeling over that at the time, but since them, he declared, all had been rangual, as he had endeavored not to tranquil, as he had endeavored not to pass by the Berger home. Another man, who was passing by the home of John L. at night recently. said the dog had leaped out at him, but that Mrs. Berger called off her pet and all was well.

"Yes, I called him off and I slapped Sullivan's face for that trick," volun-teered Mrs. Berger. "I punished him for

That dog has been stopping pedes-trians there for a long time." Mr. Elvin retorted. "They can't get by there sometimes." How does he stop them?" asked Judge Rossman.

Pedestrians Declared Frightened. "Why, he takes up a position on the sidewalk and just fortifies himself in such a manner that they don't dare go by," said Elwin.

by, said Elwin.
"I see," said the Judge, evidently satisfied. "Is John L. a big or little dog and what breed is he?"
"He's a middle-sized bull," said Mr.

Elvin.
"Do you wish to ask these gentlemen, any questions?" asked the Judge.
"Not a question," replied Mrs. Berger. "I shall simply trust to your fair-

"Is not this dog's name itself rather formidable?" asked the Judge.
"More so than the dog," replied Mrs. Berger. "I will tell your honor why I have Sullivan. It's for protection. Men have been peeping in at my win-dows and three burgiars have been in my house in recent months, and I determined to stop them; none has been since. At times, also, my daughter there alone, and Sullivan protects , too. We must have him."

Dog Is Protector. "Yes, but if he is vicious, you know,"

said the Judge. "Say, your honor," Mrs. Berger cut "Sullivan's not vicious, but he's going to protect me, and when he sees any strange man approaching—well, he objects. But as for him being victous, objects. But as for him being victous, it's a joke. Last night, when my bell rang, I opened the door, and there stood two big policemen in uniform. Where's that victous bulldog? they asked. Right at your feet, said I, and they both laughed, saying they expected to see a monster."

pected to see a monster."
"I think this case should be settled by you keeping John L indoors or mussied when out." said Judge Rossman. There is an old point of law which holds that every dog is entitled to his one bite; Suillvan has had his now, and is entitled to no more. You must either restrain him or get a gentler dog."
"All right," said Mrs. Berger smilingly. "Fil mustle Sullivan when I take him out for exercise after this. But, your honor, may I have permission to the lower on many when the lower on many when the lower on many ways when the lower on many when the lower on many ways when the lower on the lower of the lower sion to turn him loose on men who peep into my rooms after this?"

"I can't grant that," said the Judge.
"Then," replied Mrs. Berger, "I've a gun, and I'll shoot them."

"Very well," concluded the Judge.
