Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford University, decried the discussion of dollars when human blood is being spent. "When Dr. Garfield issued his order which urged the necessity of closing down industries to release ships carrying food to our soldiers over the sea," said Mr. Wilbur, "there was an immediate protest that it would cost business a large sum.

"Greed has begotten greed.
"The question is now, are we going to live on the blood of our boys because we are thinking of our dollars? "Service, sacrifice, thrift, conservation, stable finance and preparedness must typify the American people. America has been raised soft and will have to harden. Six months from now have to harden. Six months from now it will be a changed Nation." President Harry Pratt Judson, of the University of Chicago, said that "it is our mission to educate the world to the high ideals and standards that be-long to the United States."

Universal Training Advocated. Universal military training was urged by John M. Parker, of Louisiana, Progressive candidate for Vice-President in 1016. He called attention to the large number of cantonments that would be scattered throughout the country when the war is over and said that no better use could be made of them than to provide compulsory mili-tary training.

Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the National War Garden Commission, strongly indorsed the daylight savings bill, putting "a big push behind home producers."

Red Cross chapter at Oregon City that they are being "held up" by Southern profiteers, who are taking advantage of wardemands to double the price of cotton gause, used in making bandages, compresses and other surgical dressings required by the medical corps of the American and ailled army in France.

This complaint states that where Red Cross units are not able to get supplies ross units are not able to get supplies inder long-term contracts made more than a year ago, they are being com-pelled to pay more than double the normal price for cotton gauze. They attribute this hold up to the fact that the price of cotton is not regulated. It is recalled that when an attempt was made to fix the price of cotton, especially for war uses, the Southern element in Congress was able to defeat the move. The result is profiteering at the expense of patriotic women who have offered their services to make surgical dressings under Red Cross supervision for the wounded in France. Mr. Hawley is advised that similar conditions prevail elsewhere, but under existing law there is no
