SHIPS, NEEDED TO SEAL KAISER'S FATE

Workers Told They Form Second Line of Defense in Fight Against Huns.

VICTORY TO END CONFLICT

Colonel Gray and A. R. Pankhurst Tell Employes of Local Shipyards What Is Expected of Them in Winning Great War,

If rivets were bullets the "guns" of steel shipworkers in Fortland yester-day afternoon would have moved down Germans by the hundreds, judging from the way they vent their spite against the Kaiser after listening to Lieuten-ant-Colonel I. Thord Gray, late commander of the lith Northumberland Fusiliers of the British expeditionary force, who told them of happenings in the war zone and how much the success of the allied cause depended on their efforts.

"You men building ships are the second line of defense; you are the army without which soldiers and salious of the ailled forces could not last three weeks." he said.

three weeks," he said.

Colonel Gray is now the chief military speaker of the National service section of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and in company with him is A. R. Parkhurst, Jr., secretary of the section, who left the "rewrite" desk of the New York Sun after years of newspaper work in the city to take ewspaper work in that city to take p the work in the shipyards.

Shipworkers Hear Speakers.

At noon the speakers visited the plant of the Northwest Steel Company and told the men employed there, to-gether with the force of the Columbia River Shipbuilding Corporation, of their mission and what the existing war con-ditions meant in connection with the necessity for ships. At 2 o'clock in the afterneon hundreds of men at the Albina Engine & Machine Works laid

"I have spent 22 years in the British Army and have been taught not to get excited or magnify facts, and I am not excited or magnify facts, and I am not here to arouse you men unnecessarily, but to tell you of the need for ships and of the conditions troops in the field have uncovered about the 6—d Germans," said the speaker.

"A woman asked me today, after I had talked at one shippard, when the war would end," he said. "That was a deuce of a question to ask a mere man. The war will probably not be over until

The war will probably not be over until The war will probably not be over until the man power of the enemy has been reduced below the number necessary for successful defensive purposes. The central powers need for defensive purposes about $,000,000 men over the present 1950 miles of front; they also need about $,000,000 men for the munition factories, shipbuilding yards, the farms and other industries.

The present man-power of the en-

The present man-power of the en-emy is 15,480,000 men. From a purely military point of view, and not taking into consideration the possibility of any internal trouble in Germany, or Austria-Hungary, or a separate peace with Turkey, we will have to kill, cap-ture or disable about 4,000,000 more of the enemy before we can get peace with any sort of security, without Prussianized tyrannic militarism pre-

Enemy Losses Are Heavy.

"We are now putting out of action about 100,000 of the enemy a month. So it will take 44 months to finish the but as the central empires are increasing their man-power at the rate of 700,000 men a year, they would have increased another 2,500,000 at the end of 44 months. Therefore, we will ap-proximately have to deal with 7,000,000 men, which at present rate would take

"But with America coming into the war, throwing is her full force and weight with men, ships, material and resources, we expect that we will in-crease this 100,000 men a month to 250,000 men a month; divide the 250,000 in 7,000,000 and we have roughly the number of months the war will prob-

Portland Workers Hold Record.

"In the name of the spilors and sol-diers of the armies pitted against the Germans I thank you and I take off my hat to the shipbuliders of the West," said Colonel Gray. "You in Fortland hold the record for finishing a steel ship in $3 days, and Saturday you floated the record wooden hull. $3 days after the keel was laid, and you can teach the men of the East what

There were three cheers and a "tiger" for Fresident Wilson, then for Colonel Gray, and he responded by taking a picture of the gathering with a kodak. Mr. Parkhurat followed in a brief talk, urging that the men retain what Colonel Gray had narrated.

In the late afternoon the party was taken for a trip over the Columbia River Highway as guests of Emery Olmstead, vice-president of the Northwestern National Hank, and Lloyd J. Wentworth, district officer of the weeden ship construction division. At II o'clock this morning the men of the It o'clock this morning the men of the indifer plants will be addressed at Standifer plants will be addressed at Vancouver. Captain Blain expects to return to his Seattle headuarters to-night and Colonel Gray and Mr. Parkhurst will remain two or three days, so as to visit all yards.

BARGE FLEET TO BE BUILT

Steel Steamers May Tow Wooden Hulls to Atlantic Ports.

In connection with a decision of the Shipping Board to undertake the construction of steel barges, concrete tank steamers and tugs, to be used in place of tonnage taken from the domestic trade for war purposes, it has been suggested by Portland mariners that until there is a larger delivery of machinery for wooden hulls now in the Water, the Government use them as barges, first putting aboard the necessary deck equipment for handling cargo. In that way it is said some of the machinery could be obtained on the East Coast The understanding is, however, that the barge fleet and concrete tank steamers are primarily intended to re-place vessels that have been drawn from the oil trade, so the wooden ves-sels as new constructed would be of no avail. One shortage contended with now is of tugs. As a means of moving-more freight to the Atlantic side from the Northwest mariners say that the steamers being commissioned could tow the wooden hulls to Atlantic Coast ports
