

DAUBERT AGAIN TO BUCKAROOS UNIFORM

Young Shortstop to Return to Fold After Leaving Portland Team in Seattle.

INFIELD HOLE PLUGGED UP

Cliff Lee to Try to Work Behind Bat Sunday if Injured Ankle Will Permit—Clever Backstop Is Greatly Needed.

BY JAMES J. RICHARDSON.
Harry Daubert, the young shortstop of the Tacoma club who sported a Buckaroo uniform for a brief period after the Tacoma club went "ker-fluey" and who was reported as having left Judge McCredie's bed and board at Seattle, while in a fit of anger, almost knocked Judge McCredie off the Christmas tree yesterday when he breezed into the Portland magnate's office at baseball headquarters and asked for a conference—and a contract.

Daubert, who, besides being a very capable shortstop and clever of the base, is a well known baseball relationship to Jake Daubert, first sacker of the Brooklyn National League club, is said to be a diamond in the rough. At least, that is Judge McCredie's candid opinion of the youngster.

While with Tacoma, Daubert played a sensational game for the Tigers and it is said a number of inquiries were received from major league clubs desirous of landing the youngster. When Tacoma took a run-out on the other club's manager, Judge McCredie, the Buckaroos, talked "turkey" to Daubert and the lad donned a Buckaroo uniform.

One night while the Buckaroos were encamped at Seattle Daubert packed his duds and was supposed to have been on his way to Tacoma, but he was held back by a hasty retreat for one of the clubs in the Southern League. Judge McCredie's fond hopes for another contribution to his array of big league shortstops had apparently been smashed to smithereens.

A number of telegrams were dispatched to Walter McCredie and other managers around the country seeking a capable shortstop to replace Daubert, but no satisfactory response has reached local headquarters.

You can imagine the local magnate's surprise yesterday when Daubert, in a fit of anger, almost knocked Judge McCredie off the Christmas tree after a brief chat assured the Portland clubowner that he would be on hand Sunday and cavort at short for the Buckaroos against the winner of the Peninsula-Supple-Ballin game which is carded for a clash with the Bucks.

Daubert is a tall, rangy lad and in the few games he was with the Buckaroos at Seattle smashed the ball on the nose and played a bang-up game around the shortfield position. His return to the fold will add considerable strength to the Buckaroos.

Cliff Lee visited Judge McCredie at baseball headquarters yesterday and said he wanted to be on hand Sunday next Sunday upon the return of the Buckaroos if his injured ankle would permit. Lee broke a small bone in his ankle about a year ago and has been on the disabled list since, but the injured member has fast rounded into shape and Lee will endeavor to don a uniform next.

If he sports a uniform Lee will be sent behind the plate with the mask and pad. According to word received here from Judge McCredie, the Buckaroos are woefully weak behind the plate. Peterson has been doing his best to fill up the gap occasioned by Lee's injury, but has been meeting with much success. Peterson is a valuable utility player, however, and will most likely be retained.

It would not be at all surprising if "Lefty" James would pitch for the Portland Buckaroos during the time they were playing on the Yaquina street grounds. James, who has been the mainstay for the Foundation Shipyard team in the Columbia-Willamette Shipbuilders' League, is the property of the Portland baseball club and was suspended according to the laws of organized baseball for not reporting to the Buckaroos.

Judge McCredie and James are the best of friends and if the Portland magnate can arrange with the Foundation people and President Bay, of the shipbuilders' League, it is perfectly agreeable with James to pitch for the Buckaroos while the team is at home but not to accompany them on the road.

Several players in organized baseball are all reported as angling with the shipyard managers for jobs. At a recent meeting of the Oakland, Cal., shipbuilders' league one of the managers stated that he had received letters from four Vernon players, Quinn, Westerly, DeVormer and Chadbourne are the Tigers said to be dickering with the shipbuilders' League, in the property of the Portland baseball club and who played second base for Oakland last year, is managing the Hanlon shipyard team, but says he has no place for the quartet on his club.

MORRISSEY TO BOX

Salt Lake Lightweight to Meet Ingie Here June 12.

CLEVER FIGHTER CHAMPION

Well-Known Boxer Holds Inter-Mountain Title in Class—Some of Best Battlers Met in Ring by Slugger From Middle West.

At last the committee in charge of arranging the Foundation company boxing show at the Ice Palace for next Wednesday night, June 12, has found a worthy opponent for George Ingie, of Seattle, who is recognized as the undisputed lightweight of the Pacific Coast.

Yesterday the officials of the show were lucky enough to meet in touch with Lee Morrissey, the clever Salt Lake lightweight who holds the intermountain championship. Morrissey is in good shape and was glad to get a chance to meet Ingie, when asked over the long distance telephone yesterday.

Morrissey is well known throughout the country and has fought some of the best lightweight fighters that ever stepped into the squared circle, including Willie Ritchie, Joe Egan, Pat Gilbert, Eddie White, Harvey Thorpe and Ad Volgast. Morrissey has fought some of his battles over the 20-round route, but of late has been breaking on all corners for six rounds in Salt Lake and 10 rounds at Boise, Idaho. One of the best of the Northwest is Harry Casey, the battling Seattle lightweight who is now in the Army. Casey was regarded as one of the best boys in the Northwest and met and held his own with all of the boys hereabouts at his coming from behind twice and tying the fight.

For this reason the soldiers were on Sunday, and will be on the Fourth, invited to dine at private homes here. Although all but three of the soldiers at East Fork were here Sunday, there were not enough to supply the homes of persons who had given invitations.
