

PORTLAND HOST TO MR. M'ADDO TODAY

Railroad Director-General to Study Traffic Conditions in the Northwest.

RIVER TRIP MAY BE TAKEN

Plans for Entertainment of Official and Party Are Indefinite—Distinguished Visitor on Homeward Trip From California.

William Gibbs McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States and director-general of the Government Railroad Administration, will arrive in Portland today, stopping over on his homeward trip from California, where he recuperated from the severe strain of official duties, followed by conferences with the chiefs in charge of railroad administrative duties under his direction.

Accompanied by Mrs. McAdoo and members of his official party, Mr. McAdoo is traveling somewhat leisurely on his tour of the Pacific Coast and is acquiring first-hand knowledge of the transportation conditions of the different districts.

Occupying a place that is unique in the history of American transportation, as the executive head of American railroads, his duties bring the man peculiarly close to the interests of the whole people. Probably no other Cabinet official has had duties of such manifold character and surpassing importance placed upon him at one time, in controlling internal affairs of the whole people, as in the combining of the financial and transportation departments under one head.

Director Has Wide Experience.

This was not the first railroad experience of the distinguished general. In 1903 he became a director and was elected president of the Hudson & Manhattan River Railroad Company, operating the Hudson River tunnel system, which completed the first tunnel under the Hudson River March 8, 1894. The first Hudson River tunnel between Hoboken, N. J., and Sixth avenue and Nineteenth street, New York City, were opened for traffic February 25, 1908. The fourth tunnel under the Hudson was completed March 11, 1909, and all of this accomplishment was while Mr. McAdoo was at the executive head of the corporation.

Mr. McAdoo was born near Marietta, Ga., October 31, 1863. He was educated at the University of Tennessee. He was married to Miss Sarah Hazelhurst Fleming, of Chattanooga, Tenn., November 18, 1885. His second marriage was a White House wedding, May 7, 1914, when Eleanor Randolph Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, became his bride.

His activities in public service may be said to have begun when he was appointed deputy clerk of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of Tennessee in May, 1882. He was admitted to the bar in 1885 and practiced at Chattanooga until 1892, when he removed to New York. Here he practiced law until 1903. He was a delegate to the Baltimore convention of 1912 that nominated Woodrow Wilson for President, and became vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and acting chairman for the greater part of the campaign.

Great Problems Met.

On March 6, 1913, he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury. The great problems of American finance that have come before Mr. McAdoo since that time are all a part of contemporary history. When the proclamation of President Wilson was issued in December, 1917, taking over jurisdiction of the railroads as a war measure, Secretary McAdoo was designated director-general, intrusted with absolute executive authority. Under his direction the Railroad Administration has been organized and placed on a working basis.

Portland's commercial organizations desire to entertain Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo during their visit to the city, but it is not known whether any invitations will be accepted. Persons having the claim of acquaintance and personal friendship anticipate the opportunity of showing the distinguished visitors over some of the city, including the Columbia River Highway. It is probable that a river excursion also will be among the events of the day, in order that the director-general may gain an intimate knowledge of local terminal and shipping facilities.

Accompanying Director-General McAdoo are Oscar A. Price, assistant to the director-general; Edward Chambers, director of the division of traffic; and Carl R. Gray, director of the division of operation, of the Railroad Administration. Mr. Gray was a Portland visitor last week and proceeded to San Francisco to meet the other members of the party. J. C. Shaffer, private secretary to Mr. McAdoo, also accompanies him on the trip, according to information received here.
