available artillery onto the British and French, who drove them out, but the enemy could not prevent a still further advance today.

More favorable weather conditions brought out droves of aircraft this morning. The day was an excellent one for observation and this changed the character of the fighting somewhat, especially with regard to the artillery.

Along the line north of Chateau Thierry, the Franco-American forces have driven the Germans out of nearly all of the Chateau forest. The Germans are continuing their rear-guard fighting and depending much upon their machine guns.

U. S. Cavalry in Action.

Farther to the west the Americans drove through and beyond the towns of Epieds and Trugny and beyond Courpail.

American cavalry was used at one point in the operations north of the Chateau Thierry line.

To the northward the most intense resistance was offered along the extended German right flank, but the reports are that the allies have made gains and that the Germans have been unable to halt the movement toward their lines of supplies.

(By the Associated Press.)

Violent German counter-attacks and rear guard actions in great strength still fail to serve as barriers to the advance on the Soissons-Rheims salient. They have aided in slowing down the fast pace, but on the three sides of the new U-shaped battle front, important gains have been made.

At the same time, the French have been driving slowly but surely, south of Soissons the American and French troops have pushed their fronts further eastward toward the Chateau forest, that is still in the hands of the enemy, and further south, along both sides of the Ourcq River and the road leading to Fere-en-Tardenois. Germany's great storehouse for the supply of her troops to the south, the great number of enemy-held territory have been made until the maximum point where the allies are fighting near Coligny is about 10 1/2 miles from their point of departure last Thursday.

In the Marne region north of Chateau Thierry the fiercest kind of resistance for the Germans are striving hard to extricate large numbers of the German forces and save the great number of guns and quantities of war materials. The advantage in the fighting has rested with the allied troops who have pushed on northward past the village of Epieds and ousted the Germans from the greater part of the Chateau forest. In this region the allies now hold the villages of Epieds and Trugny-Epieds, which were captured by the Germans and were recaptured Wednesday in a counter-attack by the Americans. Pressing on northward, the allies have driven their lines to the north and west, which lies about six and a half miles northeast of Chateau Thierry.

Along the Marne at several points, notably in the region of Chateau Thierry and further east at Freloup, the allies have put the northern bank of the Marne into the hands of the enemy and captured a large number of cannon and machine guns and considerable war materials.

In the region between the Marne and Rheims, where the German crown prince has brought forward large numbers of picked troops, his warriors are meeting with hard usage. Following up the advance of the French and Italians of Tuesday, the British immediately took the initiative at Rheims apparently have begun a movement which possibly portends good results.

Here the British have overcome a strong counter-attack, and following it, a violent bombardment and struck the German line at Verzy for a goodly gain. This maneuver, if it is pressed to further advantage, will seriously menace the Rheims-Rheims railway, a main line of communication, and will tend materially to lessen the width of the mouth of the pocket through which the Germans are endeavoring to retreat from the Soissons-Rheims salient.

Stunton Grave for Huns.
Gauged by the war maps, the new inroads of the allied troops into the German-held territory necessarily add further to the extreme gravity of the situation of the Germans inside the huge pocket, and with the long range guns on both sides of the pocket, heavily shelling areas far behind the actual fighting fronts, with airmen bombing them assiduously, and with the infantry attacking them on all sides with rifle and light gunfire, their situation seemingly is a hazardous one.

Von Luxburg Reaches Gothenburg.
LONDON, July 24.—An Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Copenhagen says that Count von Luxburg, former German Minister to Argentina, has arrived at Gothenburg. He sailed from Buenos Aires on June 9. The dispatch adds that the German government has ordered that Count von Luxburg should be treated as a prisoner of war.

NATION VOICES GRATITUDE

Generalissimo and His Two Commanders Have Brilliant Records for Big Achievements in Previous Battles of War.

PARIS, July 24.—(Special.)—All

France is buzzing with three names as a result of the magnificent counter-attack against the latest big German drive. Three heroes have come forth from the battle with a grateful nation at their feet. They are Generalissimo Ferdinand Foch, generalissimo in charge of the allied armies; General Gouraud, the defender of Rheims, who barred the advance of the German Crown Prince, and General Mangin, who led the successful French attack.

Generalissimo Foch is responsible for the counter-attack made upon the Germans which has been so telling on the Boche forces.

The offensive launched by him is somewhat similar to the great counter-attack made by Joffre on the Marne in 1914, the allied generalissimo striking at the moment when the enemy was exhausted by his efforts.

General H. J. E. Gouraud, the allied commander east of Rheims, hero of the Verdun battle, is the man behind the movement which barred the advance of the German Crown Prince in the Champagne; who brought hosts of Germans to a complete standstill and who is driving them back along a 30-mile front.

General Mangin, hero of the Marne, who was removed in 1917 by the "Dachau" movement, has again come to the front by his recent victories. It was he who led the successful French attack against the Germans between the Aisne and the Marne.

Under his excellent leadership the French succeeded in wresting from the Marne the power of the north of Verdun, bristling with obstacles and fortifications, thus adding to the glory of the French flag.

General Mangin was also mentioned in the beginning of the big German offensive which commenced March 21, last. When the Fifth British army was in retreat, his army appeared and effectively closed the roads between the advancing enemy and Paris.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN

FRANCE, Tuesday, July 23.—(By the Associated Press.)—The claim of the German high command that the retirement on the Marne is a part of a set programme is given the lie by an order of General von Boehm, commander of the Seventh Army.

The Seventh Army has borne the full weight of the fixed position of the west, and its divisions around Soissons suffered heavily at the hands of the Americans, while those east of Chateau Thierry were thrown back across the Marne by the pressure of the French.

For this reason the order of General von Boehm, written a month prior to the beginning of the battle, is of unusual significance. He deprecates the lack of discipline which resulted in the pillaging of stores in the back areas during the advance in May, when all edible booty found in the wake of the retreating French speedily vanished.

The food situation among the hungry troops in due proportion.

Food Badly Distributed.
The order continues:
"It is necessary to depart from the beaten track, which has been followed by the German army in the past, and to begin the utilization of the captured food as rations and of the distribution of a fixed portion of the weight of the food in the front line to the fighting troops have proved to be fallacious owing to the fact that the troops have taken these provisions to the rear and have hoarded them for their own use."

The visitors are to be entertained at the Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday. Preparations are being made for the impending visit to Portland of John D. Ryan, director-general of the aircraft production, and Major-General William L. Kenney, in charge of aircraft service. They will arrive here next Tuesday evening for the purpose of conferring with the spruce industry and with the Signal Corps.

The visitors are to be entertained at the Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday, when they will be guests of honor. Colonel Disque will preside at the luncheon, which will be attended by a large number of Portland business and professional men. It is hoped that, at that time, Mr. Ryan may be prevailed upon briefly to discuss the aircraft programme, especially with reference to the part which spruce production has played in arming the Nation. Whatever he may say is certain to be eagerly received, for it is the task of supervising the entire production of fighting aircraft.

Mr. Ryan and General Kenney have been inspecting various aircraft plants in the East, and are now bound for Oregon and Washington for a personal tour of the spruce district, which is the source of supply for aircraft production. They will remain in Portland, in conference with Colonel Disque, for two days, Wednesday and Thursday, of the coming week.

Vice-President Fuller, of Portland Railway, Light & Power, Asks Conference and Gets It.

Mayor Baker and City Commissioner Kellhaher clashed again yesterday, when a resolution drafted and presented to the council by Commissioner Kellhaher came before the council for consideration.

The resolution was addressed to the officials of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and the National Railroad Administration, and requested that the arrestees which the Government is planning to lend the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company be of the type in which the company might be utilized over tracks owned by the Oregon Electric and the Southern Pacific.

Mayor Baker charged Kellhaher with failing to go to the proper companies for relief, and of accusing the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company of inefficiency at every opportunity.

Vice-President Fuller, of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, who attended the council meeting, told the council he felt that inasmuch as the resolution affected his company, a conference should be held with representatives of the company.

Without a dissenting vote the council decided to consider the resolution at a meeting scheduled for this afternoon, when other important transportation problems will be discussed.

GUERRILLA TACTICS NOTED

Bombardments Are Intense and Occur Day and Night—Enemy in Desperate Straits, as Supplies Are Depleted.

By JOSEPH W. GRIGGS.

(Copyright 1918 by the Press Publishing Company, The New York Times by arrangement.)
THE RHEIMS BATTLE SECTION, July 24.—(Special.)—The German high command has ordered a "last ditch" fight on both flanks of the salient of the enemy drive toward Paris in May, and his troops are battling doggedly to uphold the walls of this pocket so they can withdraw to the rear. The Foch-Ludendorff strategic battle, which so far has all turned in the allies' favor, still makes this salient the most vital battle ground in the great world conflict at the present time, and there is heavy fighting ahead, perhaps as heavy and sanguinary as at any time of the war.

It still continues to be a battle of the four allied nations against the Germans. It now is certain that the very heavy pressure the enemy recently put on the Italians was in the last hope that he would crumple up the Italian forces and drive through, but there are some splendid fighting men from Italy on this front, as stout hearted as they were when they held up the Boche last fall after his drive into the weakest defended part of the Italian line.

Bombardments Are Terrible.
I have had the privilege of living in the zone of operation with, and seeing the British forces on this front in actual combat in the last few days. In this great battle of nations the Oregonian has had a correspondent with the Americans on one side of this salient, and two with the British as well on the other.

The allied "squeeze play" is a momentous event of the war. This big salient from which the Boche gradually and relentlessly is being forced to withdraw is alive day and night with the agencies of modern warfare. The bombardments are intense and frequently occur several times daily. I witnessed one today at noon time, increasing of the British barrage preliminary to outflanking from two sides the village of Marfaux. It would be better described if I call it one of the nastiest machine gun nests of the war which is now taken and held by the British.

Machine Gun Fire Intense.
The thick-headed German with a machine gun is a dangerous obstacle, but when this is epidemic with these Teutons and these unerring destructive weapons, it is a wicked job at the best to solve. When a scout is captured from them, they try to fill it with explosives. There was a telltale muttering of other distant barages as I worked my way forward cautiously, and the Boche airplanes seemed to have become concentrated over the salient, and were aiming the allied aviators in low-trajectory expeditions, but only when they were certain of getting away afterward.

The splendid performance of the British troops on this front is being appreciated when it is known that within a day after detaining many of them for thinking their way through the enemy in the Rheims woods and Courton wood, which they have taken. Others filtered through the allied troops which had borne the brunt of some of the heaviest of the recent fighting and engaged in hand-to-hand fighting in dense thickets and undergrowth. The trying ordeal had to be met despite the fact that two days of heavy marching had preceded the attack.

Encounters Are Desperate.
The Boche prisoners were unanimous in saying they had been ordered to head this side of the salient at all costs, which accounts for the guerrilla type of warfare which was conspicuous in the woods fighting. Tree tops have been used as machine-gun nests.

The densest parts of the underbrush were used to camouflage machine-gun pill-boxes. In hidden recesses of the forests there were many desperate encounters. The British troops have been temporarily held up they have come in shoulder to shoulder to try and clear these German traps and both together have accepted the tasks before them in the spirit of sacrifice which marks the Franco-American fighting on the other sectors of the great battleground.

One of the finest episodes of this desperate warfare was the taking out of a small Scottish unit after it had advanced in the woods beyond the line held by other British troops. They held on for days without supplies other than iron rations, and still they held with every chance of being linked up with others, although they were completely cut off.

The pressure of the Germans between Dormans and Rheims is giving the local exemption board today a withdrawal troops to other sectors of the fighting and they are maintaining here a formidable amount of artillery. Night bombing is proceeding on an unusual scale because the nights are moonlight and still. While the allied airmen continue their daylight strafing, it is at night that the Germans try to interfere with the allied dumps and communications.

Incidentally the Boche is trying to shake people from sleeping and is shaking the correspondents out of their beds with nerve-racking blasting. What must be happening to the Germans far back from the rain of bombs that the allies are relentlessly dropping on them.

Germany Makes Another Appeal to Pacifist Element in Allied Nations — Proposal Made Through Spain.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The statement that British labor is behind Premier Lloyd-George in his recent declaration that Germany "can have peace tomorrow"—if she will accept President Wilson's formula for the future government of the world—is contained in a message to the American people from George N. Barnes, labor representative in the British War Cabinet.

AMSTERDAM, July 24.—Germany has made suggestions for a peace conference to the Spanish government, says the Socialist Vorwarts, of Berlin. The suggestions are:

First—Germany wants no annexations or indemnities in the West.
Second—The peace treaties with Russia and Roumania may not be questioned.
Third—The principle of self-determination of peoples shall not be discarded, but may be settled at the peace conference, where the fate of Belgium also is to be settled.
Fourth—The Balkan question is to be settled around the conference table.
Fifth—The principle of the free trade in the dismantling of Gibraltar and the Suez Canal and the right for Germany to use coaling stations.
Sixth—The colonial question is to be settled on the basis of the status quo.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Officials here view this reported new attempt by Germany at peace negotiations as another appeal to the pacifist elements in the entente and also as intended to quiet the uneasy socialistic elements within the central powers.

It is noted that Vorwarts is the Socialist mouthpiece and that it would be the last among the German papers to learn the purpose of the government in ordinary conditions.

LISBON, Portugal, July 24.—Dr. Sidinio Paes, president of Portugal, in the message read today at the opening of the Parliament praised the army and the navy and said that negotiations had been entered into looking to a more active participation by Portugal in the war. He justified the re-establishment of diplomatic relations between Portugal and the Valtican and said reports were constantly being received from Spain demonstrating the cordial friendship held by that monarchy for the Iberian republic. Dr. Paes said he had always been a Republican and declared he would do his best to conciliate the republic and to follow a definite foreign policy.

How He Quit Tobacco

This veteran, J. B. Lamphere, was addicted to the excessive use of tobacco for many years. He realized that he was doing himself harm and decided to quit. He needed something to "keep him" and he learned of a new book that tells about tobacco habit and how to conquer it quickly, easily and safely. In a recent letter he writes: "I have no desire for tobacco any more. I feel like a new man."

Anyone desiring a copy of this book on tobacco habit, smoking and chewing, can get it free, postpaid, by writing to Edward J. Woods, 1821 R. Station, New York City. You will be surprised and pleased.
