Reoccupation of Territory Between Complegue and Noyon Shows Allied High Command Still

Is in Ascendancy.

PARIS, Aug. 23 .- (Special.) -- Pressure continues to be exercised on the whole front of the attack between Albert and Rheims. The German defense has become stronger and progress by the allied armies is slower. Nevertheless, we notice that the German high command, for the time being, remains on the de-fensive and attacks merely by local counter attacks.

It seems logical to conclude that the

It seems logical to conclude that the enemy is preparing a new position north of the Somme and the Aisne and at present is simply trying to delay the advance of the alited troops, so as to evacuate territory slowly enough to save war material nad supplies.

The formation of General von Boehn's army in the Oise region, between the army groups of the two Crown Princes, seems symptomatic. Von Boehn will bear the brant of the fighting until Ludendorff shall have regrouped his dislocated and decimated divisions and shall have drawn up new plans. It is shall have drawn up new plans. It is reported that the Crown Prince of Ba-varia is at Munich "resting." As for the German Crown Prince, the people in Berlin content themselves with car-tooning him.

Foch Retains Supremacy.

The reoccupation of "Little Switzerland." between Campiegne and Noyon, is a sign that the allied high command is still master of its movements. The lull on the banks of the Vesle is perhaps but temporary. Nowhere are we losing contact with the German troops. They cannot retreat or escape without being immediately hindered.

That situation is what must be ham-

It is a matter of effectives that will force the Germans.

I don't expect this retirement unless the allies carry out an audacious move that will go past the northern coal mining regions in the valley of the Meuse, into the Brey region, for the Winter. The Germans still reckon they have a "guarantee" of invaded and oc-cupied districts for the final settlement of accounts. They will only recross the of accounts. Under the further progress of the French armies from the vicinity of Lassigny to Soissons a mighty wedge seemingly has been driven in between the armies of General von Boehm and the German Crown Prince. Over the entire front the Germans have been further pushed back at some points for distances from two to three miles. Noyon is now all but enveloped. The Divette River has been reached and both the Oise and the Allette rivers have been crossed and the onward thrust of the

The ascendancy of his adversary, Marhal Foch, is maintained, and there is proceeding.

The ascendancy of his adversary, Marshal Foch, is maintained, and there is every promise of its continuance, for the allied strength will probably be increased monthly by the arrival of 300.000 Americans and an enormous quantity of war materials.

prepared. It can be precipitated sooner than we foresee either by a possible allied move or by an internal crisis in Germany. That is why, for the time being, we must remain calm and collected, and not be discouraged if we find success not going exactly as during July and early August.

Let us take a clear view of the immense battle as a whole. On the western front are many sectors which may suddenly reawaken to fresh activity. The battle at the present moment is concentrated about Oise and in Picardy. But the northern and eastern extremities of Flanders and Lorraine may yet harbor "surprises."

On the Oriental front from the south, in the Balkans to the Caspian Sea, and along the trans-Siberian route there may be some "surprises," too, which await the Germans.

Progress of the War.

(By the Associated Press.)
The German battle line in France is still crumbling under the impetus of the attacks of the British and French From the region of Soissons around the curve in the front to the vicinity of Lassigny the enemy has been visited with further heavy defeats, while far-ther north, between the Somme River at Bray to the south of Arras, Field Marshal Haig's men have continued their victorious thrusts.

The allies have captured a large number of additional towns and vantage points which in the further prose-cution of the offensive are of the ut-most strategic value. Nowhere is the Particularly heavy fighting occurred at Achiet-le-Grand. The town changed hands numerous times, the vantage be-longing to the British at last accounts. Further important penetrations of the enemy line had occurred and the Brit-ish were operating well to the east of the Bapaume-Arras rallway.

In a new offensive begun by Halg from the north of the Somme to Albert, an advance of two miles eastward already has been made over the six-mile front. In this fighting the town of Albert, on the Ancre, the keystone of the German defense protecting the Germans north of the Somme, has been
