STOCKHOLM, Sept. 23.—(Special.)—The red terror is reaching a vast scale in the provinces of Russia.

It is difficult to believe this, so I shall only show the state of terror by extracts from the few Bolshevik papers that happen to reach Stockholm. They are mostly confiscated on the Russian frontier.

The Petrograd Pravda, of September 19, under the title "The Red Terror in Kazan," says: "The Extraordinary Commission is taking the necessary measures to institute red terror in this city. All counter revolutionists are being shot among them many wealthy peasants."

Hostage Lists Printed. The Petrograd Communists of the same date prints this: "At Brjansk on September 5 nine were shot. At Murom, 13 were shot for circulating rumors about Lenin's death."

The Petrograd papers all print in their editions of September 7 to 10 a column each day of lists of hostages, all officers, under the title "The answer to the white terror: continuation of the second list of the Extraordinary Commission."

The second list alone contains thousands of names, among them those of five grand dukes. It is announced that all will be executed if another attempt is made against the commissary. As other attempts are bound to be made these are as good as dead now.

Guilt Not Established. The shootings in the provinces are mostly in answer to the attempt on Lenin's life, although probably none of the victims ever saw Dora Kaplan and none was implicated in her attempt.

Death of Foes Proclaimed. The Petrograd Soviet of September 4, in citing this new domestic terror resolved, according to the Petrograd Pravda, that the "bourgeoisie murderers were aiming a blow at the heart of the proletarian revolution. We reply with the red terror of the proletariat, death to all foes of the workers' revolution."

The same issue of Pravda publishes an appeal from Moscow for a general assassination of officers. The Petrograd Communists, of September 7, explaining why 25 officials of the old regime, including a bishop, were executed at Moscow, says: "As explained by Comrade Krylenko, head of the revolutionary tribunal, these executions are an act of red terror announced after the attempt on the life of Lenin and are according to the decision of the Extraordinary Commission against counter-revolution, sabotage and speculation."

Trotsky Invokes Slaughter. The same issue of Communism published an appeal from Trotsky to the workers of Kazan, ending: "Destroy the Kakan bourgeoisie."

RICH LOAN SLACKERS PRODDED BY McADOO

SHIRKING OF PATRIOTIC DUTY BY SOME CHARGED.

Secretary Tells New York Audience Bonds in Excess of $10,000 Bought by Only 22,500.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Six billion is the minimum amount which the people of the United States are asked to subscribe for the fourth liberty loan, according to an announcement by William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, in an address here tonight outlining the Government's plans for the campaign, which starts Saturday.

Asserting that, without this vast sum "we cannot lick the Kaiser," the Secretary made a special appeal for the subscriptions of corporations and wealthy individuals. Returns from the third liberty loan, the Secretary said, indicated that wealthy corporations and persons of large means had not responded "commensurately with their abilities to help."

THREE RIDDEN ON A RAIL

Employees of Eastern & Western Lumber Co. Stand No Disloyalty.

Three employees of the Eastern & Western Lumber Company, at the foot of Twenty-first street, were given a stripe of yellow paint yesterday, and then ridden on a rail out of the yards by fellow-employees who allege that the three were pro-German. The three included an Austrian, a Swede, and a Canadian.

The employees say the offenders not only refused to buy liberty bonds, but made disloyal remarks. The men threaten to repeat the performance for the benefit of a few other alleged "bond-slackers" around the plant.

100 FINNS STRIKE TO I. W. W. APPEAL

WALKOUT NOTICE IS POSTED IN ORTING LUMBER MILL.

Posse of Citizens, Which Searches Men Who Quit, Finds Two Without Cards.

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 24.—(Special.)—One hundred workmen quit at the Orting mill of the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Company, after an I. W. W. organizer had posted a notice calling a strike until Haywood, Deba and Mooney had been released from prison.

The I. W. W. agitators have been concentrating their efforts on several mills on the Tacoma & Eastern Railroad during the past few days. These mills are engaged largely on airplane work. Last week an I. W. W. organizer was discharged at Orting for trying to get the men to go on strike. About 20 went out with him, but their places were filled. Then an agitator from Seattle posted notices calling on all "Wobblies" to go on a strike until Haywood, Debs and Mooney were released, and 100 men quit.

LIBERTY LOAN FIGURES THAT SHOULD STARTLE PORTLANDERS

Just three fighting days left in which to redeem the $19,000,000 promise, the city's share of Oregon's $35,000,000 quota. Reported by the first division, Lieutenant-General Meier and Major Daly, $2,535,000. Reported by the second division, Lieutenant-General Cranston, $1,233,000.

Reported at Liberty Temple, $217,000. Reported by shipyards and other industries, $2,600,000. Reported by Portland banks, $560,000. Pledged by workers and individual firms and business men at last night's rally, $1,500,000. Grand total to yesterday $9,725,000.

Portland banks announce that they will receive subscriptions from all who have not been visited by solicitors. PORTLAND HAS ONLY THREE DAYS IN WHICH TO DOWN ITS DEFICIT OF OVER NINE MILLION DOLLARS! ARE YOU PRO-AMERICAN? GUY W. TALBOT, General in Command.

BY BEN HUR LAMPMAN.

With scenes transcending old-time revivals, workers of the Portland liberty loan drive prodded true to their own doctrine last night, at the spectacular Auditorium rally, to which they marched in regimental formation and pledged approximately $1,500,000 additional to the city's quota.

As with one impulse, 2000 workers, swept away by the fiery addresses of the speakers, rose to their feet to signify that they as individuals freely doubled their subscriptions to the fourth loan. The huge hall rang with such tumultuous cheering as it never before had heard.

Spirit of Apathy Rapped. Launched by Emery Olmstead, city chairman, Guy W. Talbot, general in command, and their conferees of the executive staff, as an antidote for the spirit of apathy that has pervaded workers and public alike, the meeting whirled about as a beneficent boomerang and fell with a thunder-clap like the opening of a sub-treasury.

At the close of stirring music by the Camp Lewis Depot Brigade Band, and of impassioned exhortations to greater effort in speeches by Chairman Olmstead, General Talbot, Dr. E. H. Pence and Eugene Smith—with constant interruptions of applause with real heart in it—it was Mayor Baker who sprang from the crowd and wagged a forefinger at the leaders.

Mayor Starts Ball Rolling. "Let's beat Woodrow Wilson's time!" shouted Mayor Baker. "Why let the enthusiasm ooze out? Let's see what can be done right here! Now!" With a single voice they urged him to the rostrum.

"There are big men here," called Mayor Baker, "men who are amply able to double their subscriptions. Who'll be first?" The bidding for place in that demonstration of patriotism and faith started with a rush that raced over the crowd. Instantly a dozen were on their feet. Voices called from every part of the assembly—doubling, tripling, multiplying previous subscriptions. Sums that are fortunes in themselves were tossed toward the platform in spontaneous pledges.

Workers Respond to Call. The list compiled last night, as rapidly as Willis Clark, executive secretary, could race a pencil over a pad, bears the names of many prominent business and financial men of the city—but it bears as well the names of hundreds of workers to whom the doubling of a quota subscription means a problem commensurately great.
