Atkinson, A. L. Miller and E. V. Coates. They have found in several cases that rents have been boosted to a grossly excessive level, where people were making as high as 200 per cent profit on the amount of money invested.

A case cited was that of a man who paid $14 a month rent for a certain house, the owner living in some other part of the country. This man sublets this building and draws $100 per month rent. It is true he furnishes a small amount of cheap furniture, water, light and wood; but his profit was held to be entirely too much.

Another case was where an owner was getting $104 for two small houses for which $10 a month would have been fair rent before the present condition
