

DEFEAT OF THE GERMAN OFFICERS BY GERMAN OFFICERS

Hardships of Invasion Feared for Homes of Fatherland.

BERLIN WRITERS DENIED

Material Facts Show 4600 Cannon Captured and a Quarter Million of Prisoners Taken.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN THE LAON AREA, Oct. 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—The first news that reached the inhabitants of Laon of the radical change in the military situation came from German officers who had, after the victories of the allies, already ceased to agree with the Berlin military critics, whose articles proclaiming Germany unbeaten are now being circulated by wireless. With an utter lack of caution which the hearer took as a betrayal of despair, these officers opened their minds and bared their hearts in the presence of people who felt their oppression for four years.

Before a man in whose house they were billeted and who understood the German language, German officers declared: "The central empires are no longer able to stand out against the whole world. Hard times are in store for the fatherland unless peace is obtained promptly."

Without a word of regret for oppression of the people whose roofs had sheltered them, they talked with unconcealed anguish of the possibility that their own people might also feel the hardships of invasion.

4600 Cannon Captured. These direct confessions of defeat, contradicting the reports of the Berlin writers that the German retreat was purely a tactical retirement, are supported by material facts not open to controversy, such as 4600 cannon captured during the three months of the allied offensive, or about one-fourth of the entire armament of the German artillery, and 250,000 prisoners taken during the same time on the western front alone.

The Germans had about 180 divisions on this front on March 1, to which were added about 23 divisions from the Russian front. The German force was maintained in the neighborhood of 305 divisions from April to September through drafts on the reserve depots. The wastage began to tell after the battles of July and August. On September 15 the Germans had on this front 200 divisions, including Austrian reinforcements. Shortening their line had, however, enabled them to constitute a reserve of divisions. The battles of the summer and the first days of October reduced these reserves to about 30 divisions, about half of which had been recently sent to the front to be reconstituted. Twenty divisions had disappeared entirely by October 10 through progressive dislocations that have been confirmed from trustworthy sources. On that date the enemy had scarcely a dozen divisions in reserve that might be called fresh.

Immense Advantage Lost. The wastage in armament is not only in cannon captured by the allies, but in diminished production by reason of drafts made upon war industries to reinforce the field forces, and in strikes. Strategically, the Germans have lost with the vast extent of territory they had occupied the immense advantage of their position in the interior arc of a circle that enabled them to transfer troops rapidly from one sector to another while the allies were obliged to take the longer route around the circumference.

German troops detouring in the region of Valenciennes, Bohain or Le Cateau, could in a few hours be transported to the Flanders, to the Aisne, or to the Oise. The region of Bohain and Le Cateau, where this switching of forces was accomplished, is now in the hands of the allies, while the Germans not only have lost the advantage of their interior position and the turntable that facilitated the use of it, but also important lines of communication with them.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 16.—Thousands of persons early today stood on the water front hills here and watched flames destroy a big Great Northern Railway oil dock.

Blazing oil spread over the Puget Sound waters around the dock and halted attempts of tugs to pull out the Japanese vessel. The fire started at the municipal pier, which was damaged seriously.

Loss was estimated at about $1,500,000 with the cause unknown. A municipal $1,000,000 pier, which stood 200 feet from the destroyed dock, was untouched. It was said oil and other commodities valued at nearly $50,000,000 are stored in the municipal pier.
