LUMBER FOR EXPORT SEEKS SEA TONNAGE

West Coast Continues

TWO VESSELS TO SHANGHAI

Men in touch with new ship construction look for the building of a number of fore and aft schooners on the Coast, although, unless the Government interests itself in such a fleet, the spurt may not come until after the war. A few have been turned out during the past two years, and, by some, the rig with topsails instead of the "bald headed" gear is favored rather than auxiliary ships.

Greenfield in Upper Harbor.

Vern Greenfield, of the Everett Hotel, 19 years of age, is believed to have been drowned Sunday night when a canoe in which he was riding in company with William Cochran, of the Barker Apartments, overturned off Inman-Poulsen's mill. Cochran was rescued from a raft of boomsticks by the master of the schooner Alumnae, who put out in a boat. His companion was not heard of after first getting into the water, when he assured the other that he could swim and was all right. Grappier Brady, of the harbor patrol force, went to the scone Sunday night and labored there again yesterday Movements of Vessels.
