

U-BOAT ATROCITIES
GIVE LIFE TO GERMAN

Deliberate Sinking of Lifeboats Fully Established.

TRAGIC INSTANCES CITED

Death List of Ticonderoga Officially Placed at 213; Many Killed by Submarine Shells.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—One statement in the German note, the falsity of which is glaring, reads as follows:

"The German government further declares that the German navy in sinking ships has ever purposely destroyed lifeboats with their passengers."

Many cases could be quoted in reply to this denial.

Two recent cases are the Llandoverey Castle, the Canadian hospital ship sunk in the Atlantic, and the French steamer Lydiana, sunk off the north coast of Spain July 16.

The Llandoverey Castle was torpedoed and sunk off the Irish coast on the night of June 27 while returning from Halifax with no wounded on board. The German submarine made no effort to aid the survivors and even tried to sink at least one of the lifeboats. After the Lydiana had been torpedoed two whaleboats and a raft were lowered. The German submarine rammed both boats, cutting them in two. After several fruitless attempts, the submarine succeeded in sinking the raft and then disappeared without helping the survivors.

U-boat Crew Mirthful

Nine men of the crew of U-2 were picked up later, having clung to wreckage for more than a day. The second engineer of the Lydiana reported that the crew of the submarine had laughed at him when he accused them of deliberately trying to kill all on board the steamer.

Speaking in the House of Commons yesterday, James Thomson MacNamara, financial secretary of the Admiralty, said there was good reason to believe that all German destroyers and torpedo-boats which had their bases at Ostend and Zeebrugge have escaped to German ports.

Every possible step was taken to intercept them, he said, but he added, that seeing that passage could be made at night and that Dutch territorial water could be used, there was no certainty that the measures taken would be efficacious.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Two officers and 23 enlisted men of the Army lost their lives in the sinking of the American steamer Ticonderoga in the war zone September 30.

Many Victims From Ohio.

This announcement today by the War Department brought the total loss of life to 213, the Navy having previously reported 18 officers and 102 men of the crew dead, and two officers carried off as prisoners by the enemy submarine that sent the vessel down.

More than half the soldiers lost on the Ticonderoga were from Ohio. The list also gave the names of 24 privates saved. The officers lost were Lieutenants Joseph W. Freeman, of Wetumka, Ala., and Cleveland C. Frost, Berea, Ky.

The Ticonderoga, formerly the German steamer Camilla Rickmers, was torpedoed 1700 miles from shore. The only known survivors were three officers and five men of the crew, in addition to the 14 soldiers saved. The submarine is reported to have shelled the lifeboats, killing many.

Isaacs Reaches Paris.

Safe arrival at Paris of Lieutenant Edward V. M. Isaacs, who escaped from the German prison camp at Villingen after being taken prisoner by the submarine which sank the transport President Lincoln on May 31, was announced today by the Navy Department.

Lieutenant Isaacs' wife lives at Douglas, Ariz., and is the daughter of Major-General De Rosy C. Cabell, U. S. Army.

will give us 16 capital ships that will be the equal of any afloat at the time they are built. The battleships and battle cruisers authorized in the first three-year programme will be unexcelled by those of any other navy, and the country may rest assured that in the new vessels authorized our constructors will produce the most powerful and effective of fighting craft. The imperative necessity of turning out as rapidly as possible all the destroyers and other types of craft needed in the war against the submarine— for the necessities of warfare for the time required us to concentrate upon this class of construction—has led to the fear in some quarters that in devoting so much necessary attention to the building of smaller craft, we might fall some in looking out for the future in building the capital ships on which the strength of the Navy ultimately depends.

Schedule of 1916 Duplicated.

"This naval authorities have always had in mind. The three-year programme adopted in 1915 provided for 18 battleships and six battle cruisers. Now we ask for as many more, to be built as those formerly authorized are completed and facilities become available.

"The total expenditure authorized upon this new programme is $600,000,000, the provision for the first year being a third of this, $200,000,000.

This is exclusive of estimates for emergency appropriations for new vessels to be built under war urgency, which total $140,000,000, and also estimates for continuing and pushing the other programme, the emergency construction of destroyers under way and other craft.

Total Outlay Immense.

"Including the $600,000,000 for which authorization is requested in the new three-year programme, the total estimates of the department for ship construction, including armor and armament, amount this year to $972,000,000.

"The total amount I recommended for appropriation next year for ship construction, that is, for completing vessels already authorized and for new vessels, is $572,000,000."

ERZBERGER POORLY CAST

FORMER RECORD UNFITS HUN FOR PACIFIST ROLE.

Centrist Leader Notorious for Policy of Extreme Ruthlessness Avowed in 1915.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—It is recalled by the correspondent of the Times at Bern that Matthias Erzberger, leader of the German Centrists and a member of the government formed to convince the outside world of the peace-loving character of this government, in a newspaper article written in February, 1915, expressed sentiments quite the contrary of those he is now supposed to entertain. He wrote:

"The greatest ruthlessness is in reality the greatest humanity. If it should be possible to destroy the whole of London, that would be more humane than to allow one of our fellow countrymen to bleed to death on the battle field, because such a radical cure would lead most speedily to peace.

"England has stolen from us more than 400 merchant ships. The answer to this should be that for every German merchantman one English town or village will be destroyed by our airmen."

The German newspapers are laying great stress on the supposed attitude of Herr Erzberger on the peace question. They refer to his plan for a league of nations.

Newspapers here almost without exception view the German reply to President Wilson with impatience and dislike. "Germany Still Impenitent" is the caption on the editorial of the Chronicle, which dismisses the reply as abjectly unacceptable.

The Graphic is more optimistic and says: "Verbally, the Germans are getting slightly nearer the point of view upon which the allies mean to insist."

"The nigger in the woodpile," in the German reply, according to the Express, "is the desire for an armistice based on the German estimate of the rival forces as they are today." This, the newspaper says, "is a disingenuous twist of the Wilson conditions," and continues:

"We dare not consent to a suspension of hostilities unless we can obtain in October the terms we shall dictate before July to an enemy who is broken and beaten to his knees."
