OREGON MERCHANTS WILL BE ORGANIZED

Formation of State Committee to Be Undertaken at Once.

JULIUS L. MEIER AT HEAD

National War Service Committee Calls for Co-operation of Dry Goods and Department Stores.

Immediate organization of a state committee to serve under the direction of the National war service committee of the retail dry goods and department stores of the United States has been undertaken by Julius L. Meier, who yesterday received his appointment as state representative and chairman for Oregon. The province of the committee is to keep pace with Government policies in the conduct of retail mercantile concerns during the war and reconstruction period.

Four Districts Outlined. In the creation of the state war service committee Mr. Meier already has designated Oregon in four zones, naming the chairman who will have supervision therein. Telegrams stressing the importance of the work before the organization and urging thorough preparation have been sent to the district chairmen.

District chairmen have been appointed as follows: Portland and Willamette Valley, Charles F. Berg, manager of Lendon's, Portland; Eastern Oregon, H. W. Collins, merchant, Pendleton; Southern Oregon, F. K. Deuel, merchant, Medford; Coos Bay, A. S. Kohler, clothier and merchant, Marshfield.

Further organization of the state will comprise the appointment, following a conference of the central committee, of county chairmen. These in turn are to designate local chairmen for such communities as require representation in the state organization.

"The fundamental need for the creation of a war service committee," reads the official communication, "was that the Government should have the benefit of the experience and knowledge of the merchants of the Nation upon all problems the Government might be considering relative to the conduct of our business, of which price-fixing is today probably the most important. It is likewise to give the Government officials and advocates the facts surrounding retail distribution that will accomplish the desire of the Government and at the same time protect and preserve our business."

Information relative to the desires of the Government will from time to time be forwarded, as received from the National committee, to the four districts through the central office of State Chairman Meier.

Mr. Meier has been actively identified for some time past with various other war activities. At present he is acting as executive director of the Highways Transport Committee of the Council of National Defense, and as State Director of the retail section of the War Savings Stamp campaign. During the past three liberty loan campaigns he has served in executive capacities with the Portland committee.

The personnel of merchants' National War Service Committee, selected at the country-wide conference held at Washington, which was attended by Mr. Meier, comprises men widely known throughout the United States for the scope and success of their mercantile enterprises.
