The German command will have a difficult task, it is believed, to retire difficult task, it is believed, to retire in time, because, since the Americans have cut the Mezieres-Longuyon line at Sedan, the Germans have only one main line over which to return to Germany. This line runs through Liege. The calm demeanor of their leader, a famous Alabama editor, was only equaled in its reassuring effect by the display of real nerve and cool spirit by their youngest member, the Buffalo publisher. He had been eight times across the Atlantic, and said he was not scared. Obviously he wasn't.

A Danish sea captain, calmly reading a book in a quiet corner, regarded the antics of the journalists and the other entertainers with pleased benevolence. A Y. M. C. Then someone brought in word that the wireless apparatus had broken down, and the loosened wires were stringing out into the seas. It was true. But it is also true that the intrepid operator and a helper ascended the rigging in the face of the gale, and tixed it. "Not a very good job," he said later, "but it will hold." It was apparently all in a day's work.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES ON THE MEUSE AND MOSELLE, Nov. 13, 5 P. M.—(By the Associated Press.)—Germery's army was moving slowly along its whole front toward the rear today.

The American forces remain exactly where they were when the armistice went into effect.

So far as known at American Army headquarters, no disposition has been displayed to block at any point that part of the agreement providing for the withdrawal of the German troops. It is realized that the reversing of the gears of the great broken German machine will not be simple.

There would have been no surprise among the American officers had the German front remained almost unchanged, but already there appears to have been left immediately in front of the Americans little more than a frings of soldiers. In some places even that the Army men on this side do not know its location.

Fraternization Efforts Cease.

The Germans reluctantly abandoned their efforts to continue fraternization where the lines still were in proximity but threats to hold as prisoners anyone approaching the American lines virtually stopped their visits.

It was something of a sight, in pleasanter hours, to watch one young mariner ascend, and the ofter come down. When one of them went somed been blown one of them went somed by station, on the previous night, it had been to find the nest empty. His mate had literally been blown out of it, and into the water. A high wave which went clean over the ship had smashed one lifeboat to smithereens. Other damage was done to the after cabins on the upper decks. But the injuries to the staunch vessel were on the whole not material.

After an hour of a gallant struggle out to the open sea, the spronensive shut-ins noted that there was less toosing and straining, and soon there was a return to comparative stability, accompanied by a restored mental and moral equilibrium. The commander, a young man, but noted for his skill as a navigator, had turned the ship line the value of the was marking time until it might be safe to resume. A trip to th where the lines still were in proximity, but threats to hold as prisoners anyone approaching the American lines virtually stopped their visits.

Behind the American line the activity of the supply trains continued today and the troops mobilized at the front settled down to routine duty. There was an increasing number of leaves of absence, however, and the towns in the rear where troops are stationed were gayer than at any time since the beginning of the war. The celebration that began Monday night gathered momentum instead of showing signs of abating.

The Americans are marking time until orders come from Marshal Foch for the next move. The roads near the front are filled with the panoply of the war that has ended. The soldiers are wondering when they will get home.

That anyone could have been saved from her after collision with the French soldiers rejoicing over the success of their great efforts. Every one seems to take it for granted that the war cannot start again, Only one thing goes on as it did before—the work of the German prisoners.
