DEEP-SEA TRIALS OF STEAMERS DELAYED

Time Away From Plant.

J. B. Morris, in Charge of Machinery Installation, Leaves Today to Join Boston Shipping Division.

Pending the adjustment of a wage controversy between trial crews and the Emergency Fleet Corporation, deep-sea trials of wooden steamers will be discontinued, which means none will be turned over to the operating depart-

It is said that on Puget Sound deep water trials have been run on a per diem schedule. The builder's responsiwater trials have been run on a per diem schedule. The builder's responsibility ends with the six-hour run in the river, which is provided for in the contracts and, if all details are satisfactory, the Emergency Fleet Corporation accepts the vessel on the conclusion of that performance. It is after the river run that the 24-hour sea trial takes place. Following various tests, including the flooding of decks to ascertain if seams are tight, the ships are transferred to the operating department.

COOS BAY, Or., Dec. 27.—(Special.)—The tug Hercules arrived this morning from San Francisco. The tug and tow went to the lower bay for the night and the pair may sail early Saturday. Steamer Destroyed by Fire, With 2 Lives Lost, at Gibraltar.

* After stirring experiences aboard the steamer Ophir, burned at Gibraltar, November 11, when on the way from New York for Marseilles, three Oregon men of her crew have returned. They are Coxswain Lewis E. Albright, of 552 Stafford street; Chief Machinist's Mate M. C. Bartholomew, 6019 Thirty-ninth avenue Southeast, and Henry F. Manning, who, before the war, was em-ployed as a brakeman between Portland and The Dalles.

and carried 15 officers and 127 men. One officer died on route and two men lost their lives in the fire. The vessel lost their lives in the fire. The vessel carried gasoline and lubricating oil for airplanes, ammunition, general supplies and clothing. The ship made Gibraltar November 8 for bunkering and left the next day, the fire being discovered in the hold when 192 miles out, and she was ordered to return. Steam and water were turned into the hold November.

GOLD CHARMS ARE PRESENTED

L. J. Wentworth and J. W. Hall, of Wooden Ship Division, Honored.

At a dinner given at the University Club last might, in honor of L. J. Wentworth, in charge of wooden ship construction in the Oregon district for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, a double surprise was a feature. A solid gold medal charm was presented to Mr. Wentworth immediately after which a charm was given J. W. Hall, assistant supervisor. Mr. Hall had been in the confidence of the chief instigators in arranging the present for Mr. Wentarranging the present for Mr. Wentworth, but had not the slightest in-timation that he, too, was to be re-

EDUCATORS DEMAND

Crews Demand Pay for All AGREEMENT MAY BE BROKEN Compulsory School Exercises Asked by Council.

President of Oregon State Teachers' Association.

Adoption of resolutions aimed to make state and Federal education more efficient, and routine business, includment.

Two ships are ready now for their run to sea, having undergone their river trials, which were conducted without question. A short time ago men composing the trial crews objected when a change was made in the wage scale, by which they were to be paid double time for every hour worked on the 24-hour run outside. They insist that the former system of pay for straight time for the entire period away from the plant be maintained.

The office staff of the Northwest Sized Company will entertain with a banquet in honor of the president of the opening day of the annual gathering the opening day of the State Teachers' Association, which, this year, is being confined to the executive council and physical training teachers of the executive council and physical training teachers of the state, because of the prevalence of Spanish incluenzation that the former system of pay for straight time for the entire period away from the plant be maintained.
