Indication Pien Possible.

Indication that the defense may pin some portion of its effort upon the report that Henry Albers was intoxicated at the time he is alleged to have uttered the seditious remarks was evidenced in the questioning of F. R. Rundell, juror, by Henry E. McGinn, one of the attorneys for Mr. Albers.

Mr. McGinn asked the juror to state what his attitude would be, in the event that the court should instruct the event that the court should instruct the jurors "that they might take into account the fact that the defendant was bibulous and 'babulous," and that there should be made evident a "degree of inebriety amounting to drunkenness."
